BOSTON TELEPHONE STRIKE FACES BIG

PUGILIST TELLS OF DIAMONDS

The most important move in the investigation of the smuggling frauds, the reason for which was not given out, was made by the United States District Attorney's office at the Federal Building today.

Government officials surrounded the move with the greatest of mystery and refused to give out the slightest information as to their purpose. The move was the summoning of "Honey" Mellody, the prize fighter, to the federal building, where he was grilled by Assistant District Attorney Shea.

Mellody was put through a rigid questioning. He is the honored person, except his wife, to the Shevlins, now under arrest, whom the government has not investigated.

Mellody told District Attorney Shea, it is said, all about the diamonds he purchased abroad on his trip with his wife. Mrs. Mellody is a relative of Terence L. Shevlin and his wife, Annie W., now held in $2,000 bail.

Mellody Looks Worried.

That the government believes Mellody will be an important witness was shown by their holding him under police surveillance on a charge of assault and battery.

He was closeted with District Attorney Shea for more than an hour. When he came out of the District Attorney's office he wore a much worried look.

"I am under instructions of the District Attorney's office not to talk," was all Mellody would tell the newspapermen.

Bailiffs in United States Marshal Guy Morchie's office mailed today subpoenas to New York and New Jersey summoning witnesses, many of them women, to appear before the federal Grand Jury which meets next Tuesday.

There were more than 100 of these summonses. The work was so heavy that the marshal's office force on account of the Saturday half-holiday will not be able to get out all these summonses before Monday.

Gets Witness Fee.

Mrs. Mellody, wife of "Honey" Mellody, appeared at the United States subtreasury in the Federal building today and cashed a voucher for witness fees of $44.50. She was asked if she knew her

HAVRE, France, April 5.—With the body of J. Pierpont Morgan on board, the French liner France left here this evening for New York. The mortuary chapel in which the coffin rests is half filled with floral tributes. Up until sailing time wreaths and other remembrances arrived from Paris and London. The ships are ranged in a semicircle outside of the harbor and refuse to let any vessels pass in or out.

INDICTED FOR DEATH OF BOSTON GIRL IN SOUTH

A dispatch to the AMERICAN from Savannah, Ga., today stated that the Grand Jury in that city returned an indictment charging manslaughter against Isaac Silver, who is alleged to have injected morphine into the hip of Esther O'Meara, a Boston chorus girl, known on the stage as Marion Leonard.

Miss O'Meara, the daughter of Mrs. Madeline O'Meara, a South End widow, was in Savannah with the "Around the Clock" company. Silver admitted that he injected the morphine, but said he did it to ease the girl's pain.

GOTTA STOP KICKIN' HOLMES' DOG AROUN'

WEBSTER, April 5.—The words of the old Champ Clark song, "You've gotta stop Kickin' my dawg around," have a real local meaning since George Holmes of West Dudley entered complaint that his hound dog, which trots along peacefully under Mr. Holmes' wagon daily, is abused by the boys every time he comes to town. He says they must stop kicking his dog.

A bill to create a licensing board for barbers, said board to have power to make rules and regulations for barber shops, was favorably reported today by the legislative Committee on Public Health.

THREATS TO KIDNAP THE KING

LONDON, April 5.—The militant suffragettes, who have all England terrorized, began cutting telephone and telegraph wires today, to prevent news of their burnings and depredations becoming known until they could escape.

The police now charge that the militants are employing "desperate men" to carry out especially dangerous enterprises.

The hints that "lives will be sacrificed next," which the militants have thrown out, have caused heavy guard to be maintained about the King and the royal family.

The great body of English people are loath to credit that the suffragettes will attempt violence against royalty, but the succession of burnings, window smashing, picture cutting and other outrages, which is being kept up all over the country, leads the authorities to expect anything, even the kidnapping of the King.

Arson in Scotland.

They carried the torch into Scotland, burning down the grandstand at the Ayr race course, with a loss of $15,000. At Kelso two women were detected trying to set fire to the grandstand of the Kelso race course and were arrested. They smeared oil on the structure and were lighting shavings.

All the great manor houses are being strictly guarded by day and by night by policemen, gamekeepers and private watchmen.

Windsor Castle and the royal lodges are closed and guarded by patrolmen and firemen. The firemen have orders to turn the hose on any militants who attempt to invade the royal grounds.

The women have threatened to kidnap a member of the royal family or of the Cabinet and hold him for ransom, and demand the franchise as the price of ransom.

Cut Telegraph Wires.

From Glasgow come reports of outbreaks of suffragettes. A band of women attacked the Labor Exchange, hurled stones at it and broke many windows.

Whole districts in Monmouthshire are isolated by cutting of telephone and telegraph wires. Reports from Llantarn Newport, say that wires are down beyond that point.

Not only have thousands of dollars' damage been done to the wiring, but every cutting is usually a cover to some previous act of lawlessness which the "violence squads" wish to cover up until they have escaped.

The burning of Chorley Wood house in Buckinghamshire has terrorized owners of other famous mansions. Structures like Chatsworth House, Haddon Hall and other notable and historic houses and halls are guarded day and night.

BLIZZARD RAGES ABOUT DANCERS

As the 1,000 couples attending the third annual social reunion and dance of the Shepard Norwell Company Employes' Mutual Aid Association at Quincy Hall started to dance the lights went out, and an imitation blizzard of snow began.

During Intermission George Warren Shepard, who celebrated his seventy-seventh birthday last week, sang with sweetness "Asleep in the Deep" and "Till the Sands of the Desert Grow Cold." Other honor guests were Mr. and Mrs. John Shepard, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Strickland, I. S. Jonas, Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Carroll, Mr. and Mrs. Alec Mann, Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Atkins.

PATERSON, N. J., April 5.—Under a heavy guard of deputy sheriffs, William D. Haywood, leader of the Industrial Workers of the World, sentenced to six months' imprisonment for his participation in the silk strike here, was brought to court today, where his attorneys argued in his behalf on a writ of habeas corpus. The arrest of more than 150 persons in connection with disturbances following the strike has overcrowded the jail here.

HUERTA WON'T RESIGN.

MEXICO CITY, April 5.—The El Paso report that General Victoriano Huerta has volunteered to resign the provisional presidency in favor of Pedro Lescurain is denied.

BEGIN NEW HUNT FOR AINSWORTH

The visit of a mysterious stranger to the Eaton home at Assinippi have led the police to renew their search for D. Henry Ainsworth, the divorced husband of Mrs. Jennie May Eaton, now awaiting trial in the Plymouth County Jail on the charge of having murdered her husband, Admiral Eaton, by poison.

Ainsworth is known to have been in the vicinity of the Eaton home recently. He was seen by a woman whom he told he was visiting his daughters.

Mrs. Eaton mailed a letter to Ainsworth the second Sunday after the Admiral's death, it was learned today. This letter was addressed in care of a Chicago publishing house. The Chicago police have been asked to help locate Ainsworth. The police have been trying for several days to determine the last visit made by Ainsworth to the Eaton home. They believe he may have been the mysterious stranger who left the house by the "ground floor" route last Sunday and eluded pursuit.

Seek Light on Loans.

Neighbors who furnished a description of the stranger say it tallies with Ainsworth's build. It is believed Mrs. Eaton's letter may have contained a request to her divorced husband to visit her.

The police would like to ask Ainsworth if he know anything about the financial affairs of his divorced wife and her daughters.

They recall that Admiral Eaton once admitted that he had given his wife money which was given to Ainsworth on one occasion to pay his fare out of town. They are anxious to learn if Ainsworth received later loans from Mrs. Eaton.

The police continued to visit the Norwell, Scituate, Scituate Harbor and Nantasket drug and grocery stores yesterday in an effort to locate the place where the poison used in the Eaton mystery was secured.

They will bring all their pressure to bear on the proprietors and clerks of these stores to refresh their memories as to poison sales during the past year.

More light was thrown upon the financial feature in the case today when Jonathan Hatch, a grocer in Scituate, said:

"I knew Admiral Eaton very well. He trusted with me when here. The day previous to the death of the Admiral I cashed a check for him. I think it was a pension voucher, and I would place the amount as something like $300. The day after the lady died Admiral Eaton brought $30 from me and was a year paying me the loan."

Attorney Is Confident.

Attorney Francis Geogan, junior counsel for Mrs. Eaton, announced today that he had decided upon the line of defence to be followed in the case.

"I cannot disclose the nature of the defence at this time," he said, "but Mrs. Eaton will have a defence that will convince the world of her innocence."

Attorney Geogan said he did not believe District Attorney Barker would make any move toward having a sanity commission appointed to examine the defendant. He declared:

"It would be necessary for the district attorney to file such a request with Chief Justice Aiken of the Superior Court. In the event of such action I would be notified. I would certainly object to such a move.

"Monday I will confer with Attorney William A. Morse, and at that time we will decide whether to offer any objections to the indictment against our client. It is probable that we will not file any objections to the document."

The serial story of Admiral Eaton's experiences in the war with Spain will be found on Page 8.

Lynn Boy Awoke After Sleeping for Nearly Two Days

Six-year-old Frank St. Croix of No. 60 Lowell street, Lynn, who had been asleep since Thursday noon, woke up at 9:05 a. m. today, when Dr. W. L. Burns injected some nitro-glycerine into the lad's arm.

"Didn't I have a long sleep, mama," said little Frank as he stretched his arms above his head. The mother was at the bedside.

"I went asleep last night," the boy continued, "and I had a dream all about everything. I thought I was floating along in the air."

After a while Frank was able to get up from the bed, and this afternoon was playing about the house as if he had never taken a nap, lasting almost two days and two nights.

The doctors believe that the state of coma was induced by nervousness. The boy has been fed through a tube.

Frank fell asleep while standing in his mother's kitchen. When Mrs. St. Croix took hold of him he fell to the floor and had to be carried to bed.

WILSON REFUSES TO OUST MISS LATHROP

WASHINGTON, April 5.—The refusal of President Wilson to remove Miss Julia Lathrop from office as head of the children's bureau and appoint Mrs. Robert Wickliffe, of Louisiana, widow of a congressman from that State in her place, has created much comment at the capitol and there is talk of reprisals. Mrs. Wickliffe had the endorsement of 250 representatives and about half the membership of the Senate. Speaker Champ Clark made a personal plea to the President, but to no avail.

GIRLS' DEMANDS ARE MADE PUBLIC

The demands presented to the telephone company by the 2,200 girl switchboard operators in this city were made public for the first time this afternoon.

Unless hese demands are granted the girls threaten to strike next week. This walk out would paralyze much of the business of the 2,000,000 people of Greater Boston and its adjacent territory.

The optrators will vote Monday on the question of a strike.

ORPHAN GIRL, 18, DEAD IN HOTEL, MAN IS SOUGHT

WOONSOCKET, April 5.—Mystery surrounds the death of Miss Cora Destlets, an eighteen-year-old orphan, in the Woonsocket Hotel, today.

The body of the girl was found in Room 88. The gas in the room was on, and Miss Destlets had been asphyxiated.

Upon the discovery of the body the police began a search for a man who came to the hotel with the girl early today. The man left about 3:30 a. m., telling the night clerk that the young lady who had registered as his wife should not be called until 10 o'clock.

The couple had registered as John Cote and wife of Biddeford. Miss Destlets was identified, however, by people from Manville, where she lived. She had been employed in Woonsocket for several weeks.

Medical Examiner R. G. Reed, who viewed the body, was inclined towards a suicide theory, inasmuch as the door of Room 88 was locked on the inside. He held up his report pending the search for the girl's companion.

CALL WOMEN IN CUSTOMS FRAUD HUNT

husband had been before the District Attorney. Her reply was:

"No, I can't see why they want him."

Inspectors to Appear.

A number of customs inspectors and customs employes have been ordered by Collector of the Port Curtis to appear at the federal building and go before the Grand Jury.

Others to be summoned are women who have gained the reputation of globe trotters through their frequent trips to Europe. Several women implicated live in New York and New Jersey.

The investigation of the smuggling frauds has led over five States. So important are the revelations that Secretary McAdoo has issued a "gag" order in Washington to the secretaries of the treasury, instructing them that all news of the department must be given out by him.

Publication of facts in the local investigation before the government was prepared to announce them was cited as justification for the order.

Mrs. Lena Bradley-Hafford-Schram, one of the star witnesses, whose flight to New Jersey was first published in the AMERICAN, is said to have been located by government detectives, and may be arrested today.

"Honey" Mellody, the prize fighter, whose wife has been mentioned as a valuable witness, is due at the federal building today. Mellody spent several weeks in Boston this Winter, living most of the time in rooms taken by himself and wife in Oxford Terrace. Letters are said to have arrived at his suite for Mr. and Mrs. Schram.

Lame Man a Caller.

The Schrams lived during December and January in Temple street, Allston street, Mount Vernon and Springfield street. Everywhere the Schrams were visited by an elderly lame man. The Schrams' last locations were on Springfield street and on Columbus avenue. The elderly lame man was a constant caller upon the Schrams to the very last. His wife called on Springfield street once.

It had been supposed that the Schrams left Boston about a month ago, but evidence has been found that Mrs. Schram probably remained in the city until about the time the smuggling investigation began.

On the day that Mrs. Shevlin was arrested, a younger member of the family stated to neighbors that her mother had gone shopping in Boston with "Aunt Lena." Questioned further, she said "Aunt Lena" was her mother's sister.

Attorney Daniel H. Bradley, clerk of the Somerville District Court, and brother of Mrs. Shevlin and Lena Bradley, declares that he has long since lost track of his sister Lena, and did not know when she came to Boston or where she left.

"I know nothing of her whereabouts at the present time," he said. "I am in touch with my sister, Mrs. Shevlin, but have not been in communication with Lena for a considerable period."

Prominent Shevlin Guests.

Much of the evidence gathered by the government, it was learned today, centered about the doings of the extensive clique of Boston politicians, a lawyer and well known county official, who are said to have been frequent guests of Terence L. Shevlin and his wife, Annie, at their Summer home, Scituate, Mass.

Government investigators are said to have learned that the Shevlins entertained well and frequently during the Summer seasons. Their cottage at Hull was said to have been the mecca for some of the well known high livers about town. Neigabors are authority for the statements that many of these parties and entertainments lasted well into the morning hours.

Several of these former guests of the Shevlins have been questioned by government officials with the view of ascertaining what connection, if any, "Big Bill" Kelliher had with the smuggling frauds. Kelliher was said to have been intimately acquainted with several of the Back Bay dressmakers and milliners now mentioned in the investigation.

Grill Customs Employs.

A certain Customs House employe has been grilled, it is said, to tell what he knows about the admission of a woman to the docks from time to time, and if this woman was in the habit of placing on the incoming baggage stickers similar to those used by the Brennan woman, whose arrest led to the present disclosures.

PARIS BANDIT IN JAIL JUMPS TO HIS DEATH

PARIS, April 5.—After making an unsuccessful effort to escape from the Sante Prison early today, M. Lacombe, anarchist and a member of the notorious automobile bandit gang, committed suicide by jumping from the prison roof. Lacombe was arrested in this city on March 13 after a search which had lasted nearly a year. He was wanted for the assassination of M. Ducret, editor of Idee Libre, and for complicity in crimes in which Garnier and Bonnot, leaders of the automobile bandits, figured.

By infinite plans and labor Lacombe managed to saw through the bars of his cell with an implement which had been smuggled into his cell. He made his way today to the roof, but before he could get over the prison wall his escape was detected and guards overpowered him.

Lacombe belonged to an anarchist organization of men and women that for a long time held a great section of France in a reign of terror. Lacombe was sought at the time of the trial of the 22 automobile bandits, but at that time he could not be found, and consequently he was not tried with his fellows.

Lacombe lived by crime. Robbery and murder was lifted by him to the dignity of a profession. Lacombe admitted that he had killed the postmaster at Breons and a railroad employe at Les Ambrais, near Orleans.

Two years ago, in Paris, while exhibiting the Apache dance before a party of Russian tourists, Lacombe was so carried away by the passion of the dance that he killed a woman companion, with whom he was dancing.

TWO KILLED IN OHIO TRAIN WRECK

TOLEDO, O., April 5.—A Baltimore & Ohio passenger train crashed through an open switch at Hoytville, demolished the station and turned turtle. Fireman Jackson of Garrett and Grant Mason of Hoytville, who was in the station, were killed and a score of passengers were seriously injured.

The train was traveling sixty miles an hour. Six of the seven coaches were overturned. According to Engineer Cost, there was no switch light to give warning. The switch was left open by the crew of a local freight train, it is alleged.

Respectfully yours,
MARY E. MOLLOY,
President.
MARY C. MAHONEY,
Secretary.

Reporters who called at the telephone company's office today were given the following typewritten statement:

The Company's Statement.

President Spalding of the telephone company said he was not prepared this morning to discuss the possibility of a strike on the part of telephone operators. He added that he was surprised at the action to take a strike vote in the papers within twenty-four hours after an interview between himself and a committee of nine operators, lasting for over four hours, at which the requests of the operators were fully discussed, and he had promised to take the request for changes under serious advisement. As there were thirteen requests, and to grant them meant, as far as could be determined by a hasty analysis, an addition of $800,000 annually to the operating cost, he felt he could not be expected to give a decision within twenty-four hours.

Might Paralyze Business.

The disastrous effects of a big telephone strike can hardly be reckoned.

The union girls include all the switchboard operators in the big city exchanges, like Main, Fort Hill, Back Bay and so on, and all the girls in the fifty-two exchanges in the Metropolitan District.

In addition, the Boston Telephone Operators' Union has recently taken in the operators of fifty big private exchanges, like the principal hotels and such busy switchboards.

More serious than the havoc which would be raised in the commercial world would be the disaster in case of emergency.

No doctor could be called on the telephone.

No fire alarm could be sent in over the telephone.

No policeman could be summoned by telephone, in case of robbery, assault or other disorder.

Take the doctors' calls alone. The average family physician receives scores of telephone messages daily.

Families without telephones usually run to a neighbor's telephone in case of emergency.

Many 'Phone Fire Calls.

In case of fire in a residential district the fire department usually receives telephone alarms, as well as the call sent in on the regular fire alarm circuit.

A tremendous volume of business is done daily over the telephone, especially in the wholesale and commission trade.

A striking instance of this came last week when a partner in one of Boston's leading banking houses offered the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company $100 per minute for a through wire to Chicago at the time of the Western floods.

Transactions involving millions are handled daily over the telephone wires in and out of Boston.

Not only would the city be cut off from its suburbs, but the whole Metropolitan District would be an isolated community, cut off from the outside world.

Would Hit Stock Exchange.

The enormous business in provisions and food supplies would be terribly hampered. Commission men in meat, produce, fish, fruit and other staples take telephone orders daily for tons of deliveries, all over the city and suburbs.

The commission houses are in the same relation to the retail market that the retailer is to the housewife.

In a similar way, the housewife would be unable to telephone her morning orders for meat and vegetables to her provision dealer.

The banking business would be hard hit. Hundreds of times a day banking men are telephoning one another, especially for a hurried information on credits.

What a shut-down of telephones would do to State Street and the Boston Stock Exchange may be imagined.

While railroads do the bulk of their message work and train dispatching by telegraph and by private telephone systems, they depend a great deal, too, on the public telephone service.

The trolley services, both urban and inter-urban, would be greatly hampered.

The things which people do daily by telephone and which they could not do, except at great delay and inconvenience, if a general strike of the telephone girls is ordered, are innumerable. Some of the every-day necessities, comforts and luxuries which one could not get by a telephone in a strike are these:

Call a taxi.

Get a doctor or a fire engine or an ambulance.

Order theatre tickets or a box of candy.

Telephone the florist or butcher of fruit merchant.

Cancel a dinner engagement at short notice.

Ask your credit company for a customer's rating before giving answer to a proposition.

Call your broker.

There is no end to the inconveniences to individuals, to say nothing of the loss to business in hundreds of ways. The community would be like a man trying to walk on customers with his hands tied behind him.

Mayor Is Notified.

Mayor Fitzgerald and President Storrow and Secretary McKibben of Boston Chamber of Commerce were notified today of the gravity of the situation by International Vice-President G. M. Bugniazet of the operators' union, with an appeal for their co-operation to adjust matters if possible.

Mr. Bugniazet called the attention of the Mayor and Chamber of Commerce officials to the danger of a telephone strike. HERE ARE SOME RULES THAT COULD CUT DOWN CITY'S ACCIDENT TOLL

A set of rules which, if followed, will cut down materially the number of accidents among both children and grown-ups, has been drawn up by the American Museum of Safety. They are as follows:

Never touch a wire in the street; the wire may be "alive."

Never cross a street without looking both ways for passing electric cars, automobiles and trucks.

Never cross just behind an electric car.

Never jump on or off a moving car.

Never stand or sit on the car step, nor put your head or hands out of the car window.

Never get off a car facing the front.

Never run in front of a passing car.

Never "hitch on" or steal rides behind street cars and wagons.

Never play on the car tracks.

Never cross a street except at a regular crossing.

Never take chances. Always choose safety.

BROOKLINE FIGHTS FIRE 200 FEET UP

Members of the Brookline fire department risked their lives, early today, fighting a fire in the tower of the Brookline High School at Gorham avenue and Tappan street, Brookline, which was struck by lightning during an electrical storm.

The tower is nearly 200 feet high. The bolt of lightning struck the northwest corner near the top. Several persons nearby heard the crash and rushed from their homes. An alarm was sounded from Box 114.

The longest ladder in the Brookline department is only sixty-five feet. The firemen, after mounting the last rung, found the water pressure was not sufficient to reach the flames. Other lines were run up inside of the tower and the fire on the interior was easily extinguished.

The flames smouldered under the slates on the outside for three hours, until some of the firemen crawled along the base of the tower with a line of hose, and by holding each other to the almost perpendicular wall managed to drown out the flames.

A crowd braved a drenching rain to watch the aerial battle with the flames. The firemen were cheered for their nerve as the nip of a foot meant a sheer drop of 100 feet.

The fire caused a damage of $1,000. The lightning stopped the clock in the tower at 3:10 a. m.

BRANDEIS URGES BUDGET SYSTEM TO PRESIDENT WILSON

WASHINGTON, April 5.—Louis D. Brandeis of Boston, urged the budget system for appropriating government money to President Wilson. Mr. Brandeis declared the necessity is not so much for economy in governmental expenditures, as for getting more real value for what money is spent. With Mr. Brandeis were John Purroy Mitchell and Henry Bruere, chairman of the City Efficiency Commission of New York.

With this understanding, Mulraney said, he signed a spurious confession.

Maine Barkeepers Organize Union, Says Prosecutor

AUGUSTA, Me., April 5.—Although Maine is a prohibition State the bartenders of Portland, its largest city, have a union, according to the statement of Judge Benjamin F. Cleaves of Biddeford before a joint session of the Legislature today. The Legislature is conducting impeachment proceedings against several sheriffs. Today's hearing was on the case of Sheriff Lewis W. Moulton of Cumberland county, who is charged with failure or neglect to enforce the prohibitory liquor laws.

Judge Cleaves, who is assisting Attorney-General Scott Wilson in conducting the proceedings, said today that 144 saloons in Portland hold United States revenue license. Of these Judge Cleaves said thirty-six have been in the business continuously for at least a dozen years. This situation has continued to exist since Sheriff Moulton took office in January, 1911.

Judge Cleaves said one Portland saloon has a $3,000 bar.

Beauty Doctor Tells Secret

Detroit Beauty Doctor Gives Simple Recipe to Darken Gray Hair and Promote Its Growth

Miss Alice Whitney, a well-known beauty doctor of Detroit, Mich., recently gave out the following statement: "Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home, at very little cost, that will darken any hair, promote its growth and make it soft and glossy. To half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¾ oz. glycerine. These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at a very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray haired person look twenty years younger. It is also fine to promote the growth of the hair, relieve itching and scalp disease, and is excellent for dandruff and falling hair.—Advertisement.

MYSTERY IN POISON DEATH OF DOCTOR'S WIFE

Friends today are attempting to explain the mystery surrounding the death of Mrs. Elsie Turner Keith, wife of Dr. Lawrence F. Keith, formerly of Melrose, who died suddenly of chloroform poisoning at Wareham.

Dr. Keith had left his wife apparently in the best of health and spirits an hour previous and was recalled to the house by telephone to find her dead. He was obliged to force his way into the house as the doors and windows were locked. The body was on the bed in her room.

Mrs. Keith was Miss Elsie Turner of Melrose and was twenty-five years old. She married Dr. Keith in Melrose three years ago and they had been living in Wareham about a year. She was a talented painter of china and bric-a-brac.

The news of her death came as a shock to her friends, who are debating whether it is a case of suicide or accidental poisoning.

COLE TO GRILL 60 FIREMEN IN LOOTING HUNT

Sixty members of the Boston Fire Department will be given a chance to tell what, if anything, they know of the looting of the offices of the Braman-Dow Company, following the fire of February 20, to Commissioner Cole today, or run the risk of being dishonorably discharged from the department.

The investigation has simmered down to the sixty men whose names are on file at fire headquarters. A few of these are accused in some quarters of having been concerned in the robberies. The others are believed to have knowledge of the thefts which they are withholding. Commissioner Cole declared today he is determined to know the truth, if he has to discharge the whole department.

Recent developments in the case has forced belief there are two cliques in the department, one of which makes a practice of stealing at fires, and the other of concealing and disposing of stolen property. An evidence of the latter was unearthed in a recent case in court when a young man, accused of larceny, was asked what he did with the stolen property. He declared a fireman was "minding" it for him. The police then traced one of the down-town fire houses and recovered the loot. The fireman who was "minding" the property was transferred.

Persons who claim to have seen firemen stealing in the Braman-Dow building have furnished Commissioner Cole and Police Inspector Henry M. Pierce with the numbers on the hats worn by the men they accuse. The witnesses will probably be asked to see if they can identify any of the looters. The names of the witnesses are being withheld.

Firemen attached to down-town houses have also been accused of receiving cases of shoes and cloth, stolen from express wagons, and selling them at a profit. This charge forms a part of the investigation.

Commissioner Cole said he will make an example of any man who is guilty, by not only discharging him from the department, but will pursue the matter into the courts and ask that the extreme penalty be imposed.

The property stolen at the Braman-Dow fire was valued at $2,500. It was a large number of wrenches, clocks, ornaments, Columbian coins and miscellaneous articles were taken.

Cousin Reveals Honeymoon Plans of Ethel Derby

NEW YORK, April 5.—The planned secret "getaway" for Europe on their honeymoon of Dr. Richard Derby and his bride, who was Miss Ethel Roosevelt, was spoiled today because the bride's cousin, Philip J. Roosevelt, is a reporter, and he "snitched."

Reporter Roosevelt learned last night that the newly wedded pair were spending the night on the liner Hamburg, that sailed today for Rome. There the couple will honeymoon with Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt's sister, Miss Emily Carew.

Instead of keeping it a dark secret, he hunted up all his fellow scribes, and they trooped on board the boat, rounding up the Derbys just as they were going to breakfast.

Mrs. Derby was a bit annoyed at first because Cousin Philip did not keep the secret, but after a bit smiled and said:

"Well, we fooled our friends, anyway."

SOCIETY GIVES BREAKFAST FOR CABINET WIVES

WASHINGTON, April 5.—Society women of Washington, to the number of 350, today welcomed the wives of President Wilson, Vice-President Marshall and the members of the Wilson Cabinet at a formal "national welcome breakfast."

The elimination of wine from the menu was the result of a campaign which caused feeling to run high. Members of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, who occupied one of the tables at the affair, were active in the campaign.

While 350 women were satisfied because they were invited to the breakfast, at least that many more, not invited, are in a rather disturbed frame of mind. As originally planned the breakfast was to have been exclusively for Democratic women. The plan was changed, however, and as a result scores of women whose husbands are in the councils of President Wilson's party were left off the list, as the accommodations were limited.

Another innovation was the total absence of speeches. Not even an address of welcome to Mrs. Wilson graced the program. Instead, an illustrated lecture on White House furniture by Mrs. Alice Gunn Rokes followed the breakfast.

Mrs. Champ Clark, wife of the Speaker of the House, who was invited to the breakfast, did not attend because of a "previous engagement." Her non-appearance caused considerable comment.

Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Marshall, Mrs. Bryan and wives of the other members of the Cabinet were present.

MITCHELL PLANS TO SPEAK AT THREE RALLIES TONIGHT

John J. Mitchell of Marlboro, former Congressman and now Democratic candidate for Congress in the new 13th district, started his active campaign today.

Rallies in the open air are to be held tonight in Framingham and Natick and a crowded rally is promised for Locke Hall in Waltham.

General Charles W. Bartlett, former District Attorney Harvey H. Pratt, George W. Anderson, former Senator Thomas H. Dowd and Senator Charles F. McCarthy of Framingham will address tonight's rallies. Mitchell himself will speak at all.

In Waltham Mayor Patrick Duane will preside at the Locke Hall rally.

Candidate Mitchell will speak in Irving square, Framingham, at 7:30 o'clock; at West Central and Main street, in Natick, at 8:15, and will reach Waltham shortly before 10 o'clock.

JAMES PRESENTS ACCUSED SENATOR'S CASE TO WILSON

WASHINGTON, April 5.—The case of the Western Senator who has been charged with a serious offence by a woman from his own State was discussed with President Wilson today by Senator Ollie James of Kentucky, a close friend of the accused Senator. It is considered almost certain that the Senate will deal with the matter. President Wilson informed the Senator from Kentucky that he did not think there could be any change in the attitude of the administration or of the Senate toward the accused Senator until the charges are substantiated.

Dr. Holt Praises Ellis Milk Bill as Protection to Child

Dr. L. Emmet Holt of New York, one of the leading specialists of the world on the diseases of children, has given out a statement warmly endorsing the Ellis Clean Milk Bill. He says:

I have read the Ellis Clean Milk Bill. It seems to me to cover the important points with reference to a clean milk supply in an admirable manner. The enactment of such a law and its enforcement will, I believe, be of the greatest advantage to the State of Massachusetts and will result in an appreciable reduction of the death rate, especially among young children. I trust that it may become a law."

THREE LINERS OFF FOR EUROPE WITH RECORD CARGOES

Three big passenger liners with record breaking cargoes sailed from Boston today for European ports.

The White Star liner Creole, for the Azores and the Mediterranean, carried many of the principals of the Boston Opera Company, and fifty-five members of the Boston Opera chorus, comprised the entire list of second cabin passengers. There were 500 steerage passengers, among them forty aliens deported.

The Cunard liner Ultonia, for Queenstown and Liverpool, carried twenty-two first cabin and 150 steerage passengers. She was scheduled to sail Friday, but was delayed because of her big cargo.

The Leyland liner Winifredian for Liverpool carried fifty-seven cabin passengers.

SHIPWRECKED MEN SAVED FROM SHARKS

NEW YORK, April 5.—A deep sea tale of danger from storms and man-eating sharks was brought to port today by the Ward Line steamer Mananallo, from Cabanien, Cuba. The Mananallo reported that on her outward voyage she overhauled the barkentine Mary Barry, in a sinking condition, Captain Stewart and a crew of seven men on board. The barkentine had run into gales and was badly battered. She was rapidly going to pieces when discovered by the Mananallo. A school of man-eating sharks had been hovering about the sinking vessel for forty-eight hours. Stewart and his men were lashed to the rigging and nearly insane from terror when rescued.

BROOKLINE MAY BE 30 MILLION RICHER STILL

Brookline, famous as the richest town in the United States, will probably be from $30,000,000 to $40,000,000 richer in assessed valuation if the selectmen follow the lead of the Tax Commissioner of the Commonwealth, who increased the valuation of the town several million dollars prior to making up the apportionment for the State tax. The assessors say fully $30,000,000 worth of personal property is being held by Brookline persons upon which no tax is paid, and have asked all citizens to file true lists of all their holdings before May 17 under penalty of having it done for them by the assessors.

A statement of the assessors says in part:

The assessors feel that they must use extra efforts to find out the real facts in the case; and they hereby ask the co-operation of the citizens of the town in making a fair and true assessment.

To this end the assessors ask that lists may be filed at their office in conformity with the law of all personal property held by individuals, trustees, executors, administrators, guardians or conservators.

In default of this the assessors will be compelled to act on their judgement in the matter. The time for filing lists expires May 17, 1913, at 12 m.

HUNT BODY IN FIRE AT HAVERHILL

HAVERHILL, April 5.—An unidentified man is believed to have lost his life and eleven other persons were rescued by firemen during a fire which destroyed the Crosley & Rugg block on Essex and Locust streets early today. The damage is estimated at $30,000.

The missing man was a lodger on the top floor of the three-story wooden block. A search is being made in the ruins for his body. Four other lodgers and George Kotaris and his wife and two children were carried down ladders from the same floor. George Miller and his wife and child were saved from the second floor.

Representative Greene of Massachusetts probably will be elected chairman of the caucus, and Representative Burke of South Dakota as minority whip.

A resolution "protest without resistance" to the Democratic tariff revision will be adopted.

DOROTHY CLARK of Malden, descendant of Commodore Duncan, who christened the torpedo boat destroyer Duncan at Quincy today.

Photograph by Whitman Studio, Malden.

"Lost" Kin of Old Sea Fighter Duncan Names Destroyer

Miss Dorothy Clark of Malden, a lineal descendant of Commodore Silas Duncan, smashed a christening bottle into a thousand pieces over the bows of the torpedo boat destroyer Duncan, as the little craft slid smoothly off the ways at the Fore River yards, Quincy, at 10:07 a. m. today.

Rear Admiral Victor Blue, Spanish War hero, had for weeks been searching vainly for a woman descendant of the fighting commodore to do the christening. He gave up the task and put a notice in the newspapers.

Miss Clark was accompanied to Quincy today by six other descendants of Commodore Duncan. These were her father, Charles A. Clark, her two aunts, Miss Ellen L. Clark and Miss Mary A. Clark, her sister, Mary M. Clark, all of Malden, her brother, Arthur Duncan Clark of Stoneham, and a cousin, Miss Frances Clark of Chelmsford.

As the Duncan slipped into the water of Quincy bay, Miss Dorothy did her duty coolly, officers of the corporation declaring her one of the best sponsors on record at the shipbuilding works.

SISTER ROSE IN VAIN PLEADS FOR HAWTHORNE

Greater Boston relatives and friends of Sister Rose, the Bay State woman, widow of a one-time editor of the Atlantic Monthly, who called on President Wilson in an effort to secure the release of her brother, Julian Hawthorne, the writer, son of the famous Salem novelist Nathaniel Hawthorne, will be keenly disappointed to learn that her request for a pardon has been refused.

Julian Hawthorne is now under a Federal prison sentence of one year for frauds in connection with the sale of mining stock.

Rose Hawthorne as she was known in the world, is now founder and Superioress of the Franciscan Homes for Incurable Cancer in New York city and Hawthorne, N. Y., where Rev. James Anthony Walsh, M. Ap., former Boston head of the Society for the Propagation of the Faith, is building the first Catholic seminary for missionaries in the United States. She was born in Lenox, May 20, 1851, the second child of Nathaniel Hawthorne.

Sister Rose was the wife of George Parsons Lathrop, former editor of the Atlantic Monthly, and prominent in Boston literary circles. She herself was the author of several volumes of poems, of which "Along the Shore" was perhaps the best known.

Her husband's death occurred soon after their simultaneous conversion to the Roman Catholic faith, which was the cause of much discussion at the time in Boston society. Left a widow Mrs. Lathrop resolved to devote her life to victims of cancer.

She left Boston, disposed of all her belongings and took the vows in the Franciscan order and with the aid of wealthy friends founded the work which she has for nearly twenty years been engaged.

FORTY-FOOT CHANNEL FIGHT WON BY BOSTON

Boston harbor is to have its long-sought forty-foot channel. Colonel Abbott of the United States Board of Harbor and River Engineers today notified the Port Directors that the War Department has agreed to survey a forty-foot channel for the harbor.

This is an important victory for the Port Directors, the Boston Chamber of Commerce, the city administration and other men and bodies which have insisted that Boston harbor developments require this co-operation from the federal government.

Upon a forty-foot harbor channel hang all the plans for the future of the port of Boston, plans which involve the expenditure of many millions of dollars in wharves, warehouses, docks, railroad connections and similar enterprises.

The thirty-five foot channel is utterly inadequate for this port and impossible for the deep draught steamers which are scheduled to be here in the near future.

35 Feet Inadequate.

The channel question was thrashed out in detail at a hearing given by the War Department's Board of Engineers in the Federal building on March 19.

Colonel William T. Russell, chairman of the board, and his four colleagues, with engineer and secretary, listened to earnest arguments by President James J. Storrow of Boston Chamber of Commerce, Mayor Fitzgerald, Chairman Bancroft of the Port Directors, Admiral Bowles of the Port Directors, Manager Stuart of the Cunard line, Captain Crowley of the Crowley coaster fleet, Thomas F. Anderson and others.

What Bancroft Said.

General Bancroft summed up the situation for the Port Directors in a formal report, which said in part:

The Directors of the Port of Boston are engaged in the expenditure of $9,000,000 for providing improved docking and terminal facilities suitable for the largest ships. The projects already adopted are:

The construction of a terminal on the south side of the harbor suited for the largest combination passenger and freight ships.

The construction of a drydock large enough to take in any ship yet built or proposed.

The reclamation of approximately 7,000,000 square feet of flats.

Boston is 190 nautical miles nearer Europe than any other large port in the United States. The thirty-five-foot channel is inadequate for the ships in service at the pier, and for those already arranged for. There are more deep draft steamers now in service at Boston than there were in service at New York in 1899, at the time that the forty-foot project was adopted for that port.

Leads in Import Trade.

While it is not desired to enter into any discussion as to the relative claims of the different large ports for deep channels, for each port should have a channel suitable to the draft of the vessels which are naturally attracted to it, it is nevertheless fair to mention, as the question of the foreign trade of these various ports has been raised, that in the branch of the foreign trade from which the United States derives a revenue, namely the import trade, Boston exceeds the other ports by a wide margin. Customs duties collected at Boston in 1912 amounted to $23,843,110.80.

It has been suggested that the cost of improvement would be very great. But the cost of the survey itself would be very slight, and should be undertaken if for no other reason than to determine to what extent and in what directions Boston and this State can look forward to further federal co-operation in the improvement of the port.

OFFICIALS' APATHY DELAYS AMENDMENT FOR DIRECT VOTE

WASHINGTON, April 5.—Delay in the official announcement of the adoption of the seventeenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States, providing for the election of Senators by direct vote of the people, is threatened because of the apparent apathy of officials of the ratifying States.

Up to the close of office hours, although press reports showed that thirty-five States already had declared themselves in favor of the amendment, leaving only one more affirmative vote to give effect to the amendment, the State Department had received returns from only twenty-two States, the latest being New Mexico, which ratified the amendment March 15.

It is expected that on Monday the one vote necessary for complete ratification will be recorded, but weeks may elapse before the announcement can be made and the several States be legally authorized to adopt the new method of electing Senators.

Pilgrims Now Regular Heroes Beat Griffith's Great Team

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

A. H. C. Mitchell.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 5.—Under the full glare of the brilliant electric lights in front of their hotel last night, the members of the Boston National Baseball Club showed themselves to all who might be interested in their size, shape and general appearance. In the effulgence of the bright rays, they smoked and spat and lolled and laughed and joked in easy attitude.

They were all right. They were the candy kids. They were the players that had beaten the great Washington team, about whom the populace of the Capital of the United States is crazy. Said populace believes the Washington club will win the pennant in the American League this season. Nothing to it, all over but the shouting, and so forth and so forth.

But if darkness or rain, or any other unlooked-for occurrence had stopped that game of ball at the end of the eighth inning the Boston players could not have been located with a fine tooth comb. They would have sneaked back to the hotel, dodged into the dining room and melted back into their rooms. They could not have been found anywhere. Funny what a difference victory and defeat makes to a ball team

PILGRIMS SCORE EIGHT RUNS IN NINTH.

For eight innings the Boston Nationals looked like several dirty deuces in a new deck of cards. The score was 7 to 0 against them. They had played ball of the defunct egg variety and they looked about as hopeless a proposition as one would wish to see in a month of Sundays. The great Walter Johnson had faced them for six innings and only one solitary hit had been registered against his skill. And he wasn't letting himself out pi that.

But with the game apparently sewed up the great Walter retired at the end of the sixth inning and left the burden to a young man named Gallon, who pitched for Kansas City last season. About the same time "Foxy" Griffith, leader of the Washington club, looking upon the contest in the light that a young man looks upon a buggy ride, gave some of his best men a rest and sent substitutes in the field to take their places.

Griffith Gave Recruits Chance.

A sixteen-year-old Cuban, named Acosta, took the speedy Moeller's place in right field. Another Cuban, Calvo, was sent to centre field in place of Milan. Williams went in to catch in place of Ainsmith.

Griffith, who usually makes afternoon's hideous on the coaching lines, would not deign to leave the bench. These boobish tatlenders were not worthy of notice. Certainly not. Foolish.

Things went along in the calm and easy manner of a deaf and dumb convention for two innings. Neither side scored. The last chapter began by Gallon throwing away the Washington bats as the ninth opened.

Manager Griffith began unbuttoning his shirt preparatory to a quick getaway as soon as the side was retired. The "fans" began to leave. An army of T. E. Power's gloums invaded the Boston bench. What was the use? The score was 7 to 0 in Washington's favor. The poor old National League tail-enders had the sympathy of everybody. Stallings was a good fellow, but he was up against it.

"Sorry, Mitch, old boy, that you have to travel with this joke ball team" (this from my confreres of the Washington press). "Ha, ha, too bad; come and see us next year," et cetera, et cetera, ad nauseum.

The ninth inning opened. Captain Bill Sweeney took his place at the plate and went through the motions of hitting the ball. He did hit it. The ball went to the shortstop and Bill was retired at first. One out. More fans left.

Kirke Started the Trouble.

The Boston players began putting on their jackets when Bentleman Jay Kirke stepped to the plate because it was his turn. He rapped one toward the second baseman and jogged toward first. He had almost stopped running when the ball was fumbled by the second baseman, so Jay hustled and got to first safely.

Arthur Devlin went to bat and lifted a pony fly over the second baseman's head. Kirke was forced out on a force at second, but managed to make the bag. Hap Myers stroke to the plate. He laid down a bunt toward third and beat it easily, filling the bases. Subdued excitement.

Stallings started his heavy artillery, Jackson was sent up to bat for Devogt. He fanned. "Uncle Sam" Carrick swore. Two out. Score 7 to 0. Cy Seymour batted for Buster Brown. He hit a sharp one to second base and again there was a bungle. Kirke scored. Bases still filled. Connolly, the new left fielder, stepped up and walked for four bad ones, forcing in another run. Bases chocked again.

"Gimme a right-handed pitcher quick," yelled Stallings on the Boston bench.

"Let me go in and stop those fellows," said "Big Bill" James, the kid wonder.

"Go to it," replied Stallings. "Warm up quick. We'll win this game yet."

Maranville Also Delivered Hit.

Maranville, the "Rabbit," stepped to the plate and rasted a single to centre. Myers and Fred Smith (who ran for Seymour) scored. "Silent" John Titus, toothpick in mouth, drove a single to centre. Connolly scored the fifth run and Sweeney was up again. He drove a scorcher to third.

Foster picked the ball up and made a wild throw past Gandil. The bases were full. Titus tallied and Sweeney turned second and dashed for third. Gandil gagged the ball wild to get him, and Captain Bill came cheering home. This made eight runs, putting Boston one run ahead. Wild excitement on the Boston bench. Kirkie died to left, ending the inning.

"Big Bill" James went in to pitch. Griffith stalked to the first base coaching box and yelled himself red in the face.

Calvo grounded to Myers and was out at first. Gandil lined to Myers. Morgan rapped to Devlin and was thrown out. The game ended. Boston happy. Washington downcast.

Game Was Weird Affair.

It was a queer game of ball. It did the youngsters on the Boston team a lot of good. It proved to them that no game is lost or won until the last man has been retired. The Clevian team played very bad ball during the first part of the game.

Toward the last, when it seemed as though they were hopelessly beaten, they brightened up. Bad playing gave Washington many of its runs. Best was all hard and had poor support, but bad ball playing in the last of the ninth beat the game to Washington. It is these kind of games that make baseball what it is.

The same teams play this afternoon. Hub Perdue will start the pitching for the Bostons. Early Sunday morning the entire squad will leave Washington for Baltimore in order to be on time for the game with the Orioles. Stallings wants his men to have a good look at McGraw's gang before the two teams meet in the opening game on the Polo Grounds next Thursday.

Manager Stallings has received word from Porter Noyes of the Northwestern League that he will join the squad at Baltimore on Monday. He has been taking a course at Northwestern University in Chicago and completed his examinations yesterday. He has been working out with the college team and is said to be in good condition.

UNICORN TRACK MEN MAY MEET NEW YORK A. C.

By THOMAS J. HALPIN.

(Quarter-Mile Champion of United States and Canada.)

The coming outdoor season promises to be the best that New England athletes have yet had. There are more athletes in this section of the country at the present time who are able to cope with any athlete in the country for national honors than ever before.

The Boston Athletic Association has one of the strongest track teams in its history. When the athletes who are now representing the various colleges start on their Summer vacation under the colors of the Unicorn, that club should have a wonderful all round team.

Much has been said but no plans made toward securing a dual meet with the New York A. C. It is the opinion of many who have seen the athletes of both clubs perform that the local club could defeat the winged foot organization.

B. A. A. Would Be Favorite.

This is particularly true in all of the track events and with the addition of many of the star college performers, who have enrolled under the colors of the Back Bay club in the past, there is no doubt that if the two meet does take place the Boston representatives should be returned winners.

It would be a great boom for the local club to arrange such a meet. The only difficulty in the way is almost impossible to secure a good track. With the exception of Tech Field, where it is impossible to charge admission, there is no other place where an athletic meet could be staged, properly. It is for this reason that the Unicorn Club hesitates about arranging such a meet.

The Back Bay club could easily afford to stage this contest as the expenses would not be a great deal, while the results would more than pay for the outlay. There has never been any meetings between the New York and Boston organizations on the track in recent years, as the New York athletes have been far too strong for the Boston A. A. to tackle, but with the introduction of the new system of handicap under John A. Ryder, and the able management, the B. A. A. has come to the front in athletics so that at the present time a meeting between the B. A. A. and the Gotham club would be a great interest.

Taber May Join Unicorn.

In addition to the regular members of the track team there are Whitney, Wright and Enright of Dartmouth, Johnstone of Harvard and Yale, John Bingham of Massachusetts Institute of Technology. In addition Taber and Bartlett of Brown University have declared their intention of joining the local club.

TOPPING AND KERR IN MATCH TODAY

PINEHURST, N. C., April 5.—Hamilton K. Kerr of Pittsburgh, Pa., will meet Harold J. Topping of Greenwich, Ct., in today's thirty-six-hole final round for the championship trophy in the thirteenth annual united North and South amateur golf tournament. Topping found E. J. Ridgeway of Montclair, N. J., a tenacious opponent, whose disposal was a matter of doubt until the last putt had been made, the former winning, 3 and 2.

PRINCETON PLAYER SERIOUSLY INJURED

PRINCETON, N. J., April 5.—While participating in an inter-class baseball game on Brokaw Field, John B. Scudder, a member of the Princeton baseball team, was seriously injured here. He was unconscious for three hours, but it is believed his injuries will not prove fatal. His home is to Naugatuck, Ct.

ROXBURY ATHLETES AWARDED LETTERS

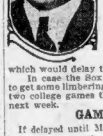
The Roxbury Latin School A. A. yesterday voted to award twelve letters to the following members of the track team: Captain Kenneth Holden, Charles Alexander, Robert Davison, Philip Marsh, L. Smith, Lee Connolley, Herbert Hay, Henry Morton, Nelson Seaver, Francis McDonald, Charles Weden and Harold Drisko.

JESS WILLARD IS OPERATED UPON

SAN FRANCISCO, April 5.—For the remainder of this week and the better part of next week, Jess Willard, the heavyweight, will pay daily visits to the doctor. He has been operated on for the removal of a growth from his nose and will not be able to fight for a month or so.

Sox to Start for Home Today Collins Gives Farming Tips

By L. R. MURDOCH



CHAMPAIGN, Ill., April 5.—If the weather is unsatisfactory this afternoon the Red Sox will break camp here and start for home. Otherwise they will not leave until tonight. The men rooted all last night for rain or cold. They long to be in Boston. Moreover, if they were able to catch the 13:45 p. m. train out of here, they could get the 5:30 out of Chicago and arrive in Boston at 8:15 p. m. Sunday, with only one night on the road.

If compelled to stay for this afternoon's game with the University of Illinois, the best they can do would be to connect with the "midnight" from Chicago and land in Boston early Monday morning, after two nights on the road. Besides that, the night train from Champaign is likely to be late, because of the Cairo flood, which would delay the champions' arrival in Boston until Monday afternoon.

In case the Sox arrive in Boston Sunday night they would be in shape to get some limbering up work at Fenway Park Monday in preparation for the two college games that precede the opening of the American League season next week.

GAME WITH REDS IS CALLED OFF.

If delayed until Monday, they would be "all in" after the long journey east, with two nights packed in sleeping cars. President Garry Herrmann of the Cincinnati Reds has finally called off the Cincinnati game for Sunday, although as early as Thursday Jake Stahl had given up all idea of playing it.

Herrmann had held on because of the promise of big gate receipts. A heavy rainstorm in Cincinnati sent his hopes flying sky high. A high wind here that scared the Sox, who had visions of cyclones and hurricanes in the wake of the floods, brought along some ice cold weather and prevented outdoor work yesterday. But the squad spent the afternoon in the University gymnasium, ran off them playing basketball, other men working on the horizontal bars and indoor track, while still others had some bunting practice.

The pitchers had the most satisfactory workouts of the trip. It was an endurance contest at top speed, and all of them "came through" satisfactorily to Bill Carrigan and Charley Farrell, who had charge of the pitching practice.

Ray Collins Wins $1 Bet.

Ray Collins had some good news today when he received a letter from his farm on the hillside near Burlington, Vermont, enclosing a $2 bill. One of Collins' pet cows expected a calf when she left home. Collins bet another agriculturist $1 that it would be a heifer, the other man taking the bull side of the market. Collins won. As the lucky Southpaw got even money on what the school boy expert agriculturists of the Sox declare should have been a 4 to 1 or 5 to 1 bet, he was elated today over both his luck and his sagacity.

Collins is a regular farmer, and almost quit baseball this season to stick to the land. He has his own opinion of the bet he won: "You see, I'm a winner all around. I win $1 and get a heifer that is almost a full-blooded Holstein. Her mother has a record of about forty quarts a day and I've still should equal or beat that. I will get 84¢ cents a quart for the milk, so the calf will return me considerably over $3 a day.

Champions Would Be Farmers.

"After taking out $1 for feed, that heifer will be a breed winner for years to come. She's worth about $65 now and when she reaches the right age she should be worth a couple of hundred. I tell you, dairy farming can be made to pay better than baseball, even world's championship baseball."

Upon the representation of Collins, backed by Tris Speaker, who is a rural real estate dealer, half of the Red Sox said today that they expect to invest next Winter in some money in farm lands, if they win it.

BROWN IS COACH.

Eugene L. Brown, the former Andover, University of Virginia and Yale pitcher, has been selected to coach the Allen School baseball candidates.

Emil Klank, manager of Frank Gotch and Marion Plestina, is due to reach Boston today with Plestina, and while here will undoubtedly complete the arrangements with Promoter George Tuohey for the appearance in Boston of the champion early in May. Tuohey's plans are pretty well laid for the Gotch match, but he will go over the ground carefully with Klank.

SILVERIO CANNOT BOX AS AMATEUR

The application of Charles Silverio, the Beverly boxer to be reinstated as an amateur, has been refused by the A. A. U. Silverio boxed as a professional and was ejected from the amateur ranks. A few weeks ago he asked to be reinstated.

Gallant and Dohan Battle to Draw at Lowell Club

LOWELL, April 5.—At the rooms of the Lowell A. C., Gilbert Gallant of Chelsea and Johnny Dohan of Brooklyn went twelve rounds to a draw. For the first five rounds Gallant showed some of the finest infighting ever seen in Lowell, but then faded away. He came back in the seventh and from then to the end it was a rattling bout.

Young Cooper of Boston and Young Morgan went to a draw and were immediately rematched for the next meeting of the club.

Kid Williams of Lawrence won from Kid Hamilton of Lowell and Dick O'Brien of Woburn won a decision over Jack Fitzgerald of South Boston.

RED SOX VACATE DOWNTOWN OFFICE

The downtown headquarters of the Boston American League Club in the Tremont building will be vacated this morning, and hereafter the official business of the world's champions will be perfected at the office at Fenway Park. It is the intention of the club to secure offices downtown next Winter and maintain them the year around.

TOWNSEND-WRIGHT TO PLAY TODAY

Beals C. Wright, the ex-champion lawn tennis player, will meet "Dick" Townsend, the old Harvard hockey captain, in the final match of the club championship squash racquet tournament at the Boston Athletic Association. Wright won his way into the finals by defeating Harry C. Johnson in straight games yesterday, 15—11, 15—11 and 15—9.

COLORADO BOXING BILL TO GOVERNOR

DENVER, Col., April 5.—The bill to permit ten-round boxing contests in Colorado under the supervision of a State commission, has been passed by the Senate. Having already passed the House, it now goes to the Governor. The bill restricts the privileges of staging bouts to clubs paying an annual license fee of $250.

BILL BRENNAN INVENTS NEW TOE PROTECTOR

Bill Brennan, National League umpire, and, to put it mildly, one of the mainstays of Tom Lynch's spectative band of manipulators, is an inventor.

Bill has a device, which he shortly will have patented, and which will eliminate the dangers of broken toes, crushed insteps and other similar disasters which occasionally befall men in the "hazardous" occupation he follows during the Summer months.

Brennan is enthusiastic about his invention and says it also will afford protection for catchers, incidentally giving Roger Bresnahan, now of the Chicago Cubs, further means of personal adornment.

"There'll be hoots from many baseball men, and some of the fraternity will not take me seriously, but, honestly, I've thought all Winter about this toe protector business, and I finally decided I would see this another season on the big circuit unless I had my toes protected from these fast foul tips and other sorts of balls that fiendish pitchers have the grandstand, but which are not any time to put an humble umpire on the shelf for keeps.

In his idle hours—and Bill has a lot of them to while away during the Winter months—the umpire built a model of his toe protector, and recently his St. Paul friends have given him all sorts of good advice about it.

Brennan hasn't been a one of them to even suggest that it isn't a good idea, and Bill is sincerely encouraged.

Brennan got the idea from a pair of toe clasps he used to wear when he rode a bicycle. Last season Clarence Owens, one of Lynch's baseball referees, suffered a broken toe from just such a ball as Bill Brennan has patented is designed to intercept.

In consequence Owens was laid up for several weeks, and now, according to Bill, frequently complains of pains in his foot that worry him a good deal.

"I think it's a great thing," said Brennan, "and just see who invented it."

BROWN-TUFTS PLAY OPENING GAME OF YEAR

BATTING ORDER.

TUFTS.	BROWN.
Bennett, 1b.	Andrews, 1b.
Stafford, 2b.	Tewhill, 2b.
Armstrong, 3b.	Reilly, 3b.
Lee, s.s.	Crowther, s.s.
Angell, l.f.	Loud, l.f.
Marzynski, c.f.	Babington, c.f.
Donnellan, r.f.	Johnson, r.f.
Jameson, c.	Snell, c.
Kreppe, p.	Eayres, p.

In the first college baseball game of the season Tufts plays Brown on Tufts Oval, Medford, this afternoon. Both teams have had a month of hard practice and a good exhibition is expected.

This is a first chance to size up the strength of the teams, and members of other college squads will attend to get a line on what may be expected of Tufts and Brown in the games to come.

Coach Cannell of the Medford team has made an eleventh hour shift in his lineup. Lee being transferred from third to shortstop, displacing Fraser, and Armstrong will play third base.

Kreppe, the husky southpaw, will start the game in the box for Tufts and Jameson will catch. Eayres will probably do the pitching for the Providence collegians, with Snell catching. Tewhill will play second base for Brown, having displaced Dinkette, while Babington will play in the outfield in place of Nash, who is on the hospital list.

COBB STILL HOLDOUT FOR $15,000 SALARY

DETROIT, Mich., April 5.—With the season's opening only a few days off, Ty Cobb of the Detroit Americans, wrote a letter received by a friend today, in which he stated that he felt sure President Navin would meet his $15,000 salary demand and that he would be in the line-up when the first game began. Navin, however, is reported as standing pat on his original offer to Cobb, which is much less than $15,000.

PEABODY BOY TO MANAGE WESLEYAN

MIDDLETOWN, Ct., April 5.—Frank B. Cawley, '14, Peabody, Mass., has been elected manager of the Wesleyan University ball team. Parker Newhall, '15, of Somerville, Mass., also helped a large majority when elected assistant basketball manager.

POLLET AFTER MATCHES.

NEW YORK, April 5.—Antonie Pollet, the French heavyweight, announced today that he wanted matches with Luther McCarty, Gunboat Smith or any other leading attractions in the big class. Pollet last night stopped Frank McManus, a mediocre battler, in the fifth round.

Amateur Title Bouts Tonight

Many Hard Battles Expected

By JAK CONWAY.

THE hungry fight "fans" of Oster Boston, who have not seen many real ring battles since the Firm A. A. was closed last Fall, will be given an opportunity to witness over eighty-five bouts when the New England amateur boxing championships are held in Mechanics Building this evening. The first contest will be staged at 6 o'clock.

In former years the opening nuber on the program was usually started at 7 o'clock. The number of boys stered this year, however, makes it necessary for George V. Brown of the A. A., who has charge of the tournament, to get things going early.

MANY FAST BOUTS ARE EXPECTED.

The tournament should be repin with excitement. There will be bon between fast, shifty youngsters, so know more than some of the profsionals, while there will also be whs between lads who hardly know enoth to go to their corner when the ll sounds for the end of a round.

Amateur tourneys are usually intending, as the boxers are out for blood sd are always eager to swap punches wh an opponent at close quarters.

Bouts will be held at 108, 115, 25, 135, 145, 158 and 175 pounds and no the heavyweight division.

Many good boys are entered in he 108-pound division, chief among wim are Howard Deshler of Cambridge, hrey Snyder of Roxbury and Louis Barer of Forest Hills. All of these lads hve done some fine work in amateur forers during the past season, and are certain to give a good account of themselves tonight.

Stars in 115-Pound Class.

The best sport of the evening is xpected in the 115-pound class, where some corking good boys are entered. Tommy Ryan, national and New England champion at this weight, will defend his title.

The East Boston youth is a wonderful little performer, but he will have to travel at a fast pace in order to beat such boys as Patsy Greene of Cambridge, Johnny Noonan of Dorchester and Gorge Pritchard of Forest Hills.

Walter Ridge of Brockton and J. W. McDonald of Quincy are the favorites in the 125-pound division. Each of these battlers has done some good work in the squared circle, and may be relied upon to put up a hard fight for the championship.

Another title holder will abe seen in action in the 135-pound class, this bang le Michael J. Sullivan and he hails from East Boston. He is a swell performer but will have to do some tall hustling in order to retain his ring laurels, as he will be pitted against a classy field, which includes such prominent glove wielders as M. J. Crowley of Malden, William Buckley of Chelsea, Joe White of East Boston and Walter Butler of Boston.

Charles Askins is picked to win the final bout in the 147-pound division. He is the New England and national champion at this weight and usually gives an excellent account of himself.

B. A. Lavelle, the New England 158-pound champion, will do battle in his class and is confident that he will prove the master of the boys whom he will meet tonight. Lavelle is in the pink of condition, and his admirers believe that he will win. Dan McDonald of this city is also entered in the class, but there is some question about his ability to make the required weight.

Many "White Hopes" Entered.

The "white hopes" and would-be "certain to be great" will be in their element in the 175-pound and heavyweight classes. Such men as Dan McDonald, Nat Boutellier, James Flavin and John Lawlor are entered.

Lawlor is a star all-round athlete. It will be remembered that it was Lawlor who defeated Whitney of Dartmouth in the shot-put at the big B. A. A. indoor track meet last February.

Schoolboy Stars to Compete in Curtis Hall Meet

There will be an athletic meeting for the members of the various classes at Curtis Hall gymnasium, Jamaica Plain, tonight. Many of the prominent schoolboys are to participate in the events, which are as follows: One hundred-yard and 220-yard dashes, 440-yard, 880-yard, one mile and ave mile runs; standing and running broad jumps; standing and running high jumps, and two wrestling competitions for 125 and 145-pound wrestlers.

12 HARVARD MEN IN PENN GAMES

Harvard will enter ten men in the relay carnival of the University of Pennsylvania to be held on Franklin Field April 24. The field events attract the Crimson men almost entirely, the hurdles being the only other event in which some of the ten men are entered. Harvard will not send a relay team to compete in this event. The entries: Moffatt and Johnstone, high jump; T. Cable, hammer throw; T. Cable and Allen, broad jump; Captain Cummings, M. St. J. Smith, Jackson and Freeman, hurdles.

NIXON TO BATTLE WOOD IN LEWISTON

Billy Nixon of Cambridge and Ray Wood of Fall River have been engaged by E. W. Hanks, the Maine promoter, to appear in the feature bout at his show in Lewiston, Me., next Thursday night. Nixon and Wood are considered one of the most satisfactory teams in New England in the lightweight division, neither wasting any time after the bell rings. The weight, 133 pounds at 3 o'clock, will enable both men to show at their best as they are legitimate lightweights.

AL KAUFMANN TO BATTLE LESTER

SAN FRANCISCO, April 5.—Jack Lester, who was to have met "Gunboat" Smith, will step into a ring on April 11 for the first time since his return from Australia, with Al Kaufmann for his opponent, in a four-round bout. Lester was anxious for a longer go, but as his first desire is to make a showing he took what he could get.

B. C. HIGH SWIMMERS ARE GIVEN LETTERS

The members of the Boston College High School swimming team, the first which the James street school has had, have received their insignia from the faculty director. The swimmers who were given the insignia are Stephen Keaney, Forrester Herron, S. Hurley, Howe, McLaughlin and Phelan.

HARVARD DASH MEN HOPE TO DEFEAT YALE

By J. O. JOHNSTONE.

(Champion High Jumper of the United States and Canada.)

Since the days of "Reggie" Foster, the star sprinter at Harvard four years ago, the Crimson has been unable to figure in the sprints against Yale. In the last three dual meets against Yale, the Blue sprinters have triumphed over the wearers of the Crimson. This year both the Harvard and Yale track teams seem to be equally balanced in the short distance events.

Harvard is banking on Tower, De Gozaldi, Adams and Abbot to best Cornell, the old Exeter Academy sprinter who is wearing the Eli colors.

Harvard is, as usual, very strong in the middle distances this year. The quartet of quarter-milers composed of Francis Capper, Barron, John Rock and Obrien are unusual fliers. These men will have a worthy opponent in Wilkie, who won the quarter-mile in the dual meet last year.

Eric Stone and Ray Huling are a couple of half-milers that can surely be depended upon.

Warren, Lawless and Maclure form a trio which may be depended upon to do great work this season. Lawless has decided to run the mile instead of two miles this Spring and should do as well in the event.

BOXERS PLACED IN GOOD STANDING

The registration committee of the N. E. A. A. A. U. met at the B. A. A. last night to act on the charges against Walter Hidge, Howard Deshler and W. Butler, amateur boxers. The charges were found to be unfounded and they will be allowed to box at the championships tonight. Henry Carlson, the Brockton boxer who was suspended some months ago, was reinstated.

A Celebrated Novel by Florence Warden

PART I.

WHY did she shut herself up and persist in being miserable, instead of returning her husband's love and changing the melancholy Alders into the cheerful, bright place it might be?

I spent a dull day, for when I went to see Haidee Mrs. Rayner instantly left the room, and I could not help seeing that it was to avoid me; so I was obliged to realize the sick child's entreaties for me to stay and to go back and wander by myself about the house and garden, too miserable in my thoughts about Laurence and his cruel desertion of me to be able to read or work.

"I think she is going to die, miss—I do, indeed," said kind little Jane, sobbing. "They won't let me in there, but I've been listening, for Mr. Rayner's away and Sarah's out, and I don't care for that Mrs. Rayner!"

And she snapped contemptuously: "I heard Haidee a-calling for you, miss, and I don't believe she knows what she is saying, poor little dear, and they ought to send for a doctor; but I don't suppose they will. Sarah don't care, and Mrs. Rayner don't care—that's about it, miss."

I could hear Haidee's voice, but I could not hear what she said, and Mrs. Rayner sobbing and calling her by name, and I went in softly, and with a shrink the mother started up from her knees—she had been on the floor beside the bed, Haidee knew me, though her cheeks were flushed and her eyes bright with fever, and she wandered in her talk.

I sat on the bed and tried to make her lie down and keep the clothes over her, for the room was as cold as the corridor. Mrs. Rayner was clinging to the rail at the bottom of the little bed and watching me with eyes as glittering as the child's. I felt just a little tremor of fear. Had I trusted myself alone with a sick child and a mad woman on the verge of an outbreak of fury? Her bosom heaved and her hands clutched the rail tightly as she said:

"What right have you to come here? Aren't you snug and warm upstairs in your turret? Why must you come and taunt over me? You are welcome to my husband. Can you spare her to me now she is dying?"

I had heard that one must always talk to mad people as if one thought them sane so I said:

"Not dying, Mrs. Rayner! Don't say that. I came down just to see if I could be of any use. Why don't you take her into your own room? It is so cold in here. And wouldn't it be better to send in for Doctor Maitland? Oh, I forgot! He is away. But you might send Sam to Beaconsborough for Doctor Lowe."

Her manner changed. As she looked at me all the anger, all the little gusts of defiance had faded out of her great eyes, and she fell to sobbing and wringing:

Possessed of Great Fear.

"I dare not—I dare not!"

"May I take her into your room, Mrs. Rayner?"

"No, no."

"Then, if you will allow me, I will take her up into mine. You won't mind her being so far from you if you know it is better for her, will you?" said I, persuasively. "It is so beautifully warm up there that it won't matter if she throws the clothes off her as she can't help doing, poor little thing, and I'll wrap her up well, so that she shall not take cold on the way."

Mrs. Rayner stared at me helplessly. "Will you dare?" she asked, fearfully.

"Certainly, with your permission."

"You know very well that my permission is nothing," sobbed she.

But she was frightened at the idea, so I wrapped the child up well in a blanket, thinking I would put her in my own bed until her little room could be taken upstairs.

Two women both started, and Sarah took up the bed and without a word went out of the room. I turned to Mrs. Rayner.

"Don't be alarmed about Haidee," I said gently. "I'll take great care of her. And if you will just give your cook, I'll send for a doctor on my own responsibility."

The poor thing stopped and kissed one of the hands I held round the child.

"Heavens bless you, Miss Christie," she said, and turning away sank down upon the empty space where the bed had been and burst into a flood of tears.

She would not listen to the few incoherent words I said to comfort her, and I was obliged to leave the room with tears in my eyes and carry my little patient upstairs. I could not go very fast, for the burden was rather heavy for a small woman like me, and by the time I got upstairs the bed was ready and Sarah had disappeared.

And now, how to get a doctor? For I was seriously alarmed about the child. To expect any more help from Sarah was out of the question. I went down to the nursery, called Jane, who was just going to bed, and asked her where Sam slept.

"In the village," she said.

Goes for a Doctor

Nobody slept at the stables now that that Mr. Rayner was away, except the old gardener, who would certainly never reach Beaconsborough before daybreak if I sent him out at 9 o'clock at night, Jane was too young to be sent all the way alone at night, the cook too old. There was only one thing to be done. I must go myself.

"Go and ask the cook, if she is not asleep, to lend me her big, round water-proof cloak, Jane," said I, "and bring me one of Miss Haidee's Shetland veils." She flew away, astonished, to fetch them, and then, seeing that I was in earnest, she helped quickly and well to make me as like a middle-aged country woman as possible by buttoning my cloak fastening a garden hat around my head like a poke bonnet and stretching my veil to it. Then she tied up my clothes like a market woman's and let me out, giggling a little at my appearance, but promising faithfully not to leave Haidee till my return and to "stand up to Sally" if she interfered.

I felt rather frightened at the boldness of my undertaking as I heard the front door close on me and realized that I had nothing in the world but my umbrella and my wits to protect me all the long three miles and a half of road to Beaconsborough.

I heard the sounds of a vehicle coming along at a good pace behind me. It sickened to come up the hill and I, to keep my character, bent over my umbrella and walked more slowly. But this subterfuge had an undesired effect.

"Hello, my good woman! Would you like a lift up the hill?" cried the driver, and my heart leapt up, for it was Laurence's voice.

In a moment I felt like a different woman. My blood seemed dancing for joy, my pulse beat more quickly and the spirit of mischief came into me so that I wanted to laugh aloud.

"Ay, ay!" I grunted out slowly and, walking until the car came up to me, climbed, with the help and evening difficulty, carefully keeping my cloak over my hands, on to the seat by his side.

"All right?" said he, and again I grunted "Ay, ay!" and once we went.

Oh, how happy I felt to be again by his side, but it was rather hard not to be able to take the hand that was nearest to me and nestle up to his shoulder and tell him how miserable I had been since last night, when he had rushed away with a dreadful threat of not seeing me again.

Reveals Her Identity

"Aren't you going to talk?" said I, in my natural voice.

We had passed the hill and were going along at a good pace, but he gave the reins such a jerk that the horse stopped.

"You won't be cross with me again, will you?" said I, anxious to pledge him to good temper while he was in the first flush of his joy at meeting me, for it was joy.

He slipped the reins into his right hand and put his other arm around me and kissed me, Shetland veil and all. And so we made it up without a word of explanation.

I told him my errand, and he told me his. His father had gone up to town that day to arrange for the disposal of some property. He had purchased a farm for Laurence a few miles away, which was to be stocked, according to his promise, when Joe Long was away. He was to return on a train which reached Beaconsborough about 10 o'clock, and Laurence was on the way to meet him.

"We will call at Lowes, and then you shall go on with me to the station and see my father.

I protested a little that I ought to go back with the doctor, but of course he carried his point.

"I was coming to see you tomorrow evening. I had to be away all today and to Lawley, and I have to be there again tomorrow with my father; but in the evening I shall call at the Lodge and ask boldly for Miss Christie. So mind you are not out."

"I shall not promise."

"And we will have a long talk together alone, thank Heaven, Mr. Rayner is away, and I will give you an address where a letter will reach me."

We were so interested in our conversation I did not notice there was a man standing very near to me during the last part of it. As Laurence finished speaking he turned his head and suddenly became aware that the man had come in white we were talking.

"By Jove! Waite here, darling," he cried hastily. And then dashed off so quickly that he ran against the man, who was dressed like a navvy and knocked his hat off.

When he returned with his father, who greeted me very kindly, he looked pale and anxious.

"Do you know who that man was I ran against," he whispered.

"That navvy?"

It Was Rayner

"It was no navvy. It was Mr. Rayner."

"Laurence!" said I, incredulously.

"I tell you it was—I swear it! What was he doing skulking about in that getup? He came down by this train. He must have overheard what we were saying. Now mark what I say, Violet—I shall not see you again."

"Hal, Laurence how can he prevent it? You will come to Mr. Rayner and ask for me—"

"Listen, Violet," he interrupted. "If you do not see me tomorrow night before 7 o'clock be at your 'nest' without fail at half-past."

"Very well, I will, Laurence—I will, I promise."

But nothing would reassure him.

"I tell you it will be of no use, my darling—of no use. We must say goodbye, for I shall not see you again."

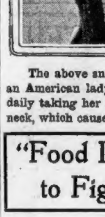
"Food Dopers' Club" Formed to Fight Pure Food Laws



Internal dissension has arisen among the dealers in food stuffs in Boston and Massachusetts. One side is denouncing Mr. Cassidy in un measured terms, and is declaring that the honest and reputable food dealers condemn him. The other side, consisting of representative dealers in every line line of business, is praising Mr. Cassidy and indorsing his work.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

A deputation of reputable dealers in fruit and vegetables appeared this afternoon before the Committee on Public Health to fight one of the bills bearing my name. A bill exactly similar had been introduced by Inspector Joseph I. Johnson of Cambridge.

The fruit and vegetable men presented their case. Then Inspector Johnson explained to them the provisions of the proposed bill.

Thereupon the dealers withdrew their opposition, and before the hearing ended they indorsed the original bill with one or two insignificant alterations.

Alfred E. Briggs had fought this same bill to the last ditch. He represented the Fruit and Produce Exchange, and so I was surprised to see men in the trade he represented favoring the bill he had opposed.

I talked with them afterward, and the result was that a remarkable condition of affairs was revealed.

It appears that thirty or forty great food dealers, or organizations of food dealers, led, apparently, by the zealous Mr. Briggs, have organized to fight all food legislation.

They have prepared pamphlets and circulars which are to be distributed broadcast throughout the State. These documents will not deal with the measures before the Legislature, but will attack me personally.

Now, of course, my record has nothing whatever to do with the question of whether or not these bills should pass. The Public Health committee realizes this, and so does everyone else, except the irate food dopers and some misguided opponents of these bills.

But the fact remains that this "Food Dopers' Club," has centered its attack upon me.

Now these circulars and documents are so phrased as to make it appear that the united food trade of the State is denouncing me. As a matter of fact, I understand that the great mass of the market dealers are not members of the Exchange. And upon the testimony of the twenty odd dealers who indorsed my bill, the majority of the reputable market firms indorse my work, or else say—

"Let the laws pass, they won't hurt us."

THE MEN WHO ARE FIGHTING THESE BILLS ARE THE MEN WHO WILL BE INJURED BY THEM.

THESE BILLS WOULD FORCE FOOD DOPERS TO MEND THEIR WAYS.

You can draw your own conclusions as to the commercial ideals of the men who come to you to oppose these bills.

THE MERE FACT THAT A FOOD MERCHANT OPPOSES THESE FOOD MEASURES IS PRESUMPTIVE EVIDENCE THAT HE HAS BEEN BREAKING FAITH WITH HIS CUSTOMERS.

Remember that when you receive a pamphlet or a document to which are signed the names of thirty or more firms and associations.

And remember, too, that these signers do not represent ALL food dealers, or even the MAJORITY of food dealers. Remember also that they aren't thinking of YOUR interests, but of THEIR OWN.

Then you can judge for yourselves as to what they would have you believe.

You will soon hear from this "Food Dopers' Club" of mine. When you do, remember that you can always tell a food doper, because he "hollers" when you demand pure food.

And later I shall have facts and names to give you, showing just how spotless are some of the men crying loudest for the defeat of these food laws today.

"Forewarned is forearmed."

Science Provides a Means for Each Face to Be Ever Smiling

Nothing Is So Cheering as the Smile That Radiates From a Face That Beams With the Assurance of Perfect Health —Tona Vita, the New Tonic, Can Chase Away All Gloom by Sending the Elements of Nature Coursing Thru the Body, Bringing Health to Every Organ.

Smiling with perfect health is a very apt saying! While lots of people with pluck and grit will force a smile, no matter how much they are suffering, it can easily be seen that it is not that happy, spontaneous smile of good health.

There is a smile in every drop of Tona Vita, the new tonic which is meeting with such success in the treatment of nervous debility.

Tona Vita has restored happiness to people who have been feeling despondent and blue, who have not been able to tackle their work as though they liked it, who have been troubled with fits of fulness after eating and have lost their keen, healthy appetite, whose imagination has led them to believe that they have been suffering from many different organic diseases, people, who have been, as they expressed it themselves, "generally run down," but who really are victims of nervous debility.

Tona Vita puts such people on their fees as only a long stay in a sanitarium with attendance to rest and diet, formerly was able to do.

This tonic is being handled by all druggists in Boston.

New Symphony by Chadwick Produced

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

A new Symphony by a Boston composer was the feature of the Symphony concert yesterday. It was George W. Chadwick's "Aphrodite," a symphonic fantasie.

The title and thought were suggested to Mr. Chadwick by a beautiful head of Aphrodite in the Boston Art Museum, which was brought from a seaside shrine upon an Aegean island.

It is not program music, but it is descriptive in an impressionistic sort of way. It paints vague pictures of what the Aphrodite saw during the centuries she looked out over the Aegean Sea.

Mr. Chadwick admires the style of the French modernists. There is much in his orchestration that suggests Debussy and more Charpentier. He is a melodist himself and has combined light, trivial and occasionally really beautiful themes with tinkle tankle, formeless orchestration of the type affected by the Debussy school. His march movement was fresh and invigorating, his love music fugacy as a comic opera love song. On the whole a fine composition, much more worth producing than several of the German novelties of the season.

Rimsky Korsakoff's rich and dazzling symphony, "Antar," contrasted beautifully with Chadwick's sea piece. Of the grand and magnificence of this symphony there is today no question.

Volkmann's Serenade No. 3 in D minor proved to be a graceful, jaunty and pleasant piece, which displayed the command of his orchestra possessed by Heinrich Warnke.

The orchestra played superbly.

Powerful Story of Love and Tragedy

With Admiral Eaton in the Spanish War

By LIEUT B. B. McG.

A Companion in arms of Admiral Eaton. Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner. All rights reserved.

"Shortly after passing the southern entrance, I sighted a wreck burning on the beach, and a little later discovered the Gloucestar standing by a second wreck, apparently to save her crew. These wrecks, together with three others that we sighted, were all blazing fiercely and two of them blew up with a loud report and large volume of smoke shortly after we passed them. At 12:45 communicated with the Indiana and told her of the man-of-war I had sighted off Baiquiri. Captain Taylor ordered me to proceed at once to the commander-in-chief with the information.

"At 1:15 communicated with the Iowa and notified Captain Evans that I had sighted a Spanish man-of-war off Baiquiri and, at his request, assisted in signaling some of his boats from the wreck nearby. I proceeded to the westward and found the flagship with her consorts lying off the Christobal Colon, which was aground at the mouth of a small river. We captured 508 Spanish prisoners, of whom 496 were enlisted men and fourteen were officers. I also received a guard of twenty-five marines and a commissioned officer guarding the prisoners.

"At 11 p. m. I got under way and proceeded to Guantanamo Bay, where I arrived at 7:30 a. m. today. The prisoners are now on board the ship and then far they have given us no trouble.

"I desire to add that during our run to the westward while hastening to communicate with the commander-in-chief, the engines made at times eighty-one revolutions per minute, showing a speed in excess of sixteen knots, which is in excess of any that she made while in the employ of the Old Dominion Steamship Company. I consider it my duty to commend to you the efficiency of the engineer force on this occasion.

"Congratulating you on your complete victory won by yourself and the squadron under your command, I am, very respectfully,

"J. G. EATON, Commander commanding."

Faced Explosion Peril.

To give one an idea of the danger the naval reserves and crew of the Resolute passed through in this engagement, the following report of Commander Eaton is appended:

Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, August 15.

Sir:

In addition to the report made to you on July 4, with regard to part taken by this ship in the action of July 31, I respectfully request that you will append to the report the statement that at the time action began and during action, while the Resolute was under fire from enemy, she carried in one of the upper staterooms on the hurricane deck 240 pounds of dry gun cotton with detonators, and on the lower deck 23,000 pounds of wet gun cotton and mines. The destruction of the ship might have resulted from the explosion of a single shell, especially in the dry gun cotton.

As many shells struck around, beyond and about the ship, she was during two epochs of the day in serious danger.

J. G. EATON,
Commander commanding.

"Love Not Vanquished by the Strong Woman of Today"

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THERE is a volume which has interested all the poets, philosophers, artists, historians and sages since the world began.

It has a cover which allures. When this volume is fresh from the hands of the great printer the cover is dainty, pretty and in bright colors. The colors soon fade, and the prettiness and daintiness vanish, but, unlike any other volume, the greater the havoc time works on the exterior, the greater the store of knowledge on the inside.

This volume is called "Woman." And every mother's son many times during his brief span looks casually at the cover, perhaps turns a page or two, and claims he has mastered all the secrets, the problems, the mysteries, the volume contains.

Among these sons of Solomon, who glance and say, "I know," there are many artists who portray on canvas all that they have discovered. One, a Frenchman, M. Nemos, has made a picturing of his discovery which has excited great applause from other sons of Solomon, who say, "Wonderful, wonderful!"

This picture is called "Expulsion," and you are invited to look at the copy on this page. If you are a son of Solomon, an organization to which every man believes his wisdom entitles him to membership, you will also say, "Wonderful!"

If you are a woman you will know that no man really knows, but that the woman who has wisdom knows she must let him think he knows.

What Every Woman Knows

The picture is supposed to represent the attitude of the modern woman toward the god of love, "for whom she neither has time nor inclination. With the forehead and expression of a Minerva and the proportions of a Juno, she sits securely enthroned in power and knowledge, with the arrows wrested from the god of love in a hand imperiously raised to drive him from her presence.

This is the picture of the modern woman as every man thinks he knows her. What every woman knows is that if any woman has ever stilled the cry of her heart, and bidden love depart she has called upon him to return before he was out of sight.

He can come in no guise in which he is not welcome, he can never be such a plague or a torment that she would bid him depart.

She may be modern in every outward expression; she may jeer at love; she may call those women weak and spineless who regard love as worth all the world beside; she may take pride in her scorn of him, but down in the bottom of her heart there is a longing for him which is never stilled.

All that the giving up means in the freedom of self development and ambition; all the applause of the world, all honor, all fame, all the sweetness of the rewards of self-effort; nothing the world can offer is worth in the final accounting the cost a woman must pay in driving out love.

M. Nemos is a very clever artist, but his hands are quicker than his ears. The women who decry love make their protest known with the blare of trumpets and in strident tones. They are few in number, but they made a loud noise. M. Nemos heard the noise, and thought he heard the voice of all the women in the world.

No Trumpets Here

Love has a language that is low and sweet and flute-like. It is the cry of the heart, and the heart never trumpets its appeals. Women all over the world are crying for love, and all that love means: a husband, a home, shelter, the touch of a baby's hand, and the joy of sacrifice and service.

But they do not march with a blare of trumpets to make this want known. They do not hire halls and engage speakers to declare for them that love is the aim, the beginning, the end, the sole existence of woman, and that they want it.

They keep this little longing hidden deep in their hearts. Some frankly honest admit it. Others, to conceal their sorrow that love has never come, claim they don't want the little god to find them, and would drive him away if he dared appear.

They deceive the men; they do not deceive other women; they do not deceive themselves.

Love sends many ambassadors, and these ambassadors sometimes have poor credentials, but the woman at the door of whose heart they appear opens the door and gets down on her knees. She does not ask to see the credentials. Wisdom, prudence, caution, self-interest, all are forgotten when love appears.

She is no longer a "Modern Woman." She has lost all reckoning of time and is just Woman.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

A Plot for the Movies

"I HAVE called it," said Daysey Mayme Appleton to the proprietor of a moving picture film company, "The Old Way and the New," and if you will get a man to take the lead and turn on your camera I will give you a production that will appeal to the heart."

An appeal to the heart also appeals to the purse, and the proprietor started his machine going, and Daysey Mayme became for one brief hour a heroine in two love tales, one of yesterday and one of today.

It will cost you only ten cents to see it, the hall air in moving picture theatres being furnished without extra cost, and when you come away you will have a better understanding of Modern Woman. The story unfolded is a demonstration of the effect of modern hygienics on the female heart.

The Old Way

The old way: With the machine winking every section, Daysey Mayme appears walking down a country lane. There is dew on the grass and her feet tread on daisies. She stoops to pick one; then she turns her face toward the sky to note that the lark is on the wing.

She is happy. She loves! He comes! Her heart pants at the sound of his step up a way that is plainly visible to the audience. She puts one hand to her heart as if to control it. He approaches. He is near. More panting. He reaches her side!

He tells her he loves her. She swoons (mark the swoons; painting is more modern) with emotion.

She recovers from the swoon. He gets on his knees and vows he will love her forever. She falls into his arms.

The next scene begins six hours later. He has met another. He is false. Daysey Mayme wanders alone to the churchyard and listens to the evening drive. She grows pale and thin. She pines away to the cold tomb, and as she is being carried from her home on her bier her false lover rides from the church with his bride.

This is all to "the old way." The next pictures show "the new."

Daysey Mayme walks down street in high heels and tight skirts. She sees a man behind a soda fountain. She goes in. She orders a sundae. She has fallen in love!

Gone Forever

She writes him letters. She escorts him home. She asks him to marry her. He refuses!

Daysey Mayme gives a gulping sob.

She felt as if she had to show that much respect to traditions, but that was all!

He has gone out of her life forever, but she doesn't repine. She grows cynical. She is glad she is free. She reads the reports of the scientists that the kiss is a relic of wild animals trying to bite each other, and is glad she is above such weakness as wanting love and kisses.

She attends an equal suffrage meeting. She speaks next with a yellow badge, and in the last act she is throwing rocks through the drugstore window.

Does Marriage Bore You?

By DOROTHY DIX

WHY is it that men find matrimony more of a bore than women do? They do, you know. The words, to my nothing of the city streets, are full of wife deserters, while you hardly ever hear of a woman who deserts her husband and children.

It is the men who find domesticity so dull that they forsake their fireside of an evening for the club or corner saloon.

It is the women who read up on politics and baseball so that they may be able to talk intelligently and interestingly to their husbands. It is men ever poets at heart who put on the fashions so that he can hold a heart to heart conversation on draped skirts and wired collars and interrogation-point feathers with his wife.

It is women who live in deadly fear that their husbands will get tired of them and run off after some straight fronted young girl when they get fat and forty. You never observe any man worrying over the danger of his wife getting weary of him, because he's gotten middle aged and bald-headed and bay windowed.

Why Is This?

It's men that yawn their heads off after dinner if they stay at home, and who either lie down and go to sleep on the couch or doze over their newspapers.

Why is this? Are women more stupid than men? Are they less entertaining conversationalists? Are they personally less attractive than men?

Perish the thought! Still, the truth remains that the feminine constitution appears to stand the wear and tear of matrimony better than the insect line one does. Yet matrimony is hardor upon women than it is upon men, and the wife is called upon to make a thousand sacrifices where the husband has to make one.

No other work on earth is so monotonous as house work, the constant doing over of small tasks that have to be done again the next minute, and that show no tangible result. The housewife cannot point to the dinners she has cooked and her family have eaten, the clothes she has washed and mended, and they have soiled and torn again; the floors she has swept, and that have been littered the next hour, as the result of her labor.

Women, too, are more grateful for kindness from their husbands than husbands are for attentions from their wives. A woman with a really appreciative husband goes about beating upon cymbals and calling on her friends to observe how blessed she is, whereas a man takes everything that a good wife does as no more than his due.

The average wife has the longest hours of any worker in the world, the smallest amount of outside diversion and the least pay, and yet she finds matrimony not only endurable but a pleasant state, while the one best bet is that the average man spends his time wondering what made him fool enough to saddle himself with a wife.

Men Say Yes

I have received many letters on this subject, both from men and women. Almost every letter written by the men says emphatically that matrimony is a bore, and a man is a fool to get married, while the women's letters are a paean in praise of the happiness of wedlock.

Here are samples of the opinions of men on the question.

A man who signs himself A. W. writes: "Is matrimony a bore? It certainly is, if after a hard day's work the husband comes home to a complaining wife instead of to a home where he can rest. A woman knows, or if she doesn't she ought to, that after she is married she is bound to have trouble. Now, then, she ought to marry with the resolve that she will bear her matrimonial worries the best she can without adding them to her husband's. If a man is in business for himself he has business troubles; if he is a laborer he has a hard time keeping his job from the younger men. All men have enough troubles without having their wives' worries. In short, it is enough for a man to support his family without his wife making life a bore to him by ceaseless complaining. It's the wife's fault that matrimony is dull."

Another man writes:

"Of course matrimony is dull. It's worse than dull. It's purgatory. I am a hard-working man, and after trouble after trouble during the course of the day I come home to a dissatisfied wife, only to be badgered by her fault-finding and nagging. I stand by my marriage vows for better or worse, and were it not for the fact that I have two children I believe her tongue would drive me insane. What is life with a woman of this sort, who nags all the time, no matter how hard I try to please her? When I come home at night I very seldom have my meals ready—sometimes have to wait an hour or two for my dinner. I cannot stand this, and though I dearly love my two little children, I am thinking of leaving home and going to some distant land."

And here's another man who stopped marrying when he was in his salad days and who is offering up thanks for his luck. He says:

"I know from my own experience that if I had married at twenty, when I had a bad case of 'puppy love,' I would not be in the circumstances that I now am. Had I married this girl in my boyhood days I would have been burdened with a family and compelled to keep my nose to the grindstone to make both ends meet. Instead of that, by staying single, I was able to save a little money, and when opportunity came my way to take advantage of it and make an investment that has made a fortune."

CURED TERRIBLE HUMOR ON FACE

Could Not Go on Street Without Veil. Tells What Resinol Did for Her.

Philadelphia, Dec. 6, 1912.—"In December, 1908, my face broke out in sores. I tried anything that was recommended, and my face got worse instead of better. I spent over $100 and got no benefit. The face and neck sores were red and the eruption had the appearance of small boils, and it looked me terribly. I cannot tell you how terrible my face looked—all I can say is, it was dreadful, and I suffered beyond description.

"I have not gone on the street any time since 1908 without a veil, until now. Just four months ago a friend persuaded me to give Resinol a trial. I have used three cakes of Resinol Soap and less than a jar of Resinol Ointment, and my face is perfectly free from any eruption, and my skin is as clear and clean as any child's. It is about four weeks since the last pimple disappeared." (Signed) Mrs. M. J. Bateman, 4200 Viola st.

Nothing we can say of Resinol equals what others, such as Mrs. Bateman, says of it. If you are suffering from itching, burning skin troubles, pimples, blackheads, dandruff, sores, boils, stubborn sores, or piles, it will cost you nothing to try Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap. Just sent to Dept. 17-P, Resinol, Baltimore, Md., for a free sample of each. Every druggist sells Resinol.

Know Your Mother-in-Law

By WINIFRED BLACK

DEAR me, so your mother-in-law says that the reason your husband is falling in love with another woman is that you aren't as pretty as you were when he married you, and, oh! dear, what, what shall you do about it?

The first thing to do, it seems to me, is to ask your mother-in-law very gently and kindly if she was as pretty after she'd been married ten years as she was the day she was a bride, and then to ask her again if she thinks your husband is as pretty as the day that you were married, then sit down and listen quite calmly to what she has to say.

It's a good idea to talk a good deal with your mother-in-law as long as you can talk pleasantly. You'll get a good many ideas as to the kind of woman she is who had the forming of your husband's character, and making him just the kind of a man that he is. It will all help you to understand what doubtless is incomprehensible at times.

What kind of a woman is mother-in-law, anyhow? Does she love her prosaic old husband, too? Does she make him happy or are there whispers that all has not always been just as it should be in the home?

Is she a woman who cares a great deal for books and nothing at all for facts? Would she rather have things look right than to be right? Does she wear a pipestem skirt and a drug store complexion at fifty-five?

Has she a heart, a real heart, or just something that beats and tells her when she is running up stairs too fast?

How did she bring up that son of hers? Did she train him to take his part in the home life, to be one of the family, or just to be an idol to be worshipped?

Was he a "let me do that for you, mother" boy, or a "Ma, where's my hat" young man?

When some one had to go without a new Spring suit, who did it—mother or the young man?

Did sister have to give up her piano lessons to keep brother in spats and new neckties?

And when Aunt Harriet came to visit who took her around to see the sights? Funny old Aunt Harriet, who could make the best cookies in the world, and wore the queerest clothes, was it sister or brother who did the honors for her?

Did mother go to the church sewing society and let brother pound little brother almost to a jelly trying to make him do something he didn't want to do, and when mother came home and was told of it, did she say, "Oh, well, don't bother me about it."

How does sister-in-law get along with her husband? Is she pretty, too—as pretty as mother-in-law thinks you ought to be—and is her husband fond of her yet?

What does father-in-law say about it all, or haven't you asked him yet? I would—It is sometimes a good thing to get father's ideas of things from the man's side of the house.

Maybe you have been wrong, maybe you have been careless—maybe you have let a fairly good husband drift away from you because you don't take the trouble to keep him in love with you—oh, yes, love requires care and attention, just as much as any other delicate fruit.

Of course, your husband has worked hard to keep your love all this time or you wouldn't care so much about his falling in love with some one else, would you?

If you have been wrong—the truth is no less the truth because it is told to you by your mother-in-law.

Listen to what she has to say, listen with your mind and your heart as well as your ears—you may learn something it will profit you to know. Even if she speaks in a nagging tone.

Think the thing all over, just as you would think it all over for any one else. Leave personality out of it. Just get your mind in this frame: "What's the matter with this woman I know? Her life seems to be drifting into troubled waters. I wonder if I can't help her get it out again."

Don't be angry, don't be miserable. You have a problem to solve, get to work and solve it. And when you have done, write to us and tell us how you did it. There are thousands of women trying to get an answer to the same kind of puzzle—you may be able to help them, too.

Famous War Horses

THE fact that King Ferdinand of Bulgaria, commander-in-chief of the Balkan forces, has a favorite black charger which he has named Varna, after the place of that name on the Black Sea where his Summer palace is situated, reminds one of the affection which has existed between celebrated soldiers and the horses which have accompanied them through their various campaigns.

One of the most famous war-horses was Lord Roberts' gallant charger Volonel, which died a few years ago, and lies buried near the Royal Hospital, Dublin. Volonel was a grey Arab which Lord Roberts bought in India, and he rode the animal to Kandahar.

Lord Roberts was very much attached to the animal, and when Queen Victoria awarded medals to the soldiers who had gone through the Afghan War, the hero of Kandahar proudly hung round his charger's neck the Kabul medal with four clasps and the Kandahar star of bronze.

The best-known of Lord Kitchener's war-horses was a handsome chestnut which he named Omdurman. The animal carried Kitchener during that battle, and ultimately went with his master to South Africa during the Boer War.

Mention of the South African campaign reminds the writer that in 1904 he had a chat with some of the 2nd Life Guards at Knightsbridge Barracks, who introduced him to the most remarkable horse in the British Army, known to the regiment as Freddy of Paardeberg. This animal was the only horse out of 260 taken to South Africa during the Briton and Boer War which returned to this country fit for service again. Freddy went through six engagements without receiving a scratch, and came home in capital condition, being ultimately decorated by Queen Alexandra with a silver medal bearing his official number, D. 35, this medal, together with six bars, being attached to its breastplate.

Freddy of Paardeberg died last year at the age of eighteen, and his medal with the clasps is to be seen in a case in the officers' mess anteroom at Regent's Park Barracks.

Among other famous war-horses might be mentioned Copenhagen, the Duke of Wellington's chestnut charger, which carried his famous master through the Peninsular War, and bore him for eighteen hours on the day of Waterloo. On that day, too, Napoleon rode Marengo. After his master's flight the animal was found by an English officer wandering disconsolately on the battlefield, and he was sent to England. He survived Napoleon nine years, and when old age and pneumonia combined to end his career his skeleton was sent for preservation to the Royal United Service Institution in Whitehall.

FIREMEN GIVE $300 TO FLOOD HUMANITY TAX

Have you paid your Humanity Tax?

Many AMERICAN readers continue to send theirs in daily. Why don't you join the crowd?

The Officers' Club of the Boston Fire Department set a splendid example to other clubs and organizations throughout the city. They sent in the magnificent sum of $300 yesterday to be added to the fund for the relief of the Western flood sufferers.

Thousands Are Needed.

Thousands of dollars are still needed. The terrible suffering and deprivation of those in the stricken districts deserves more than the usual nine days' wonder.

Though the first shock of the calamity is over, great suffering and actual want still linger. The AMERICAN is doing all in its power to rush measures for relief. There's plenty of chance for our readers still to aid.

This fund has been opened to enable thousands of kind-hearted people of small means to contribute their share to the final victims. The AMERICAN has pledged itself to rush supplies of clothing and money to the stricken district and to distribute them to the flood sufferers through the relief stations in the district.

Remember, a dollar in time of need is worth several times its value later on.

The AMERICAN Relief Bureau is at No. 5 Winthrop square.

CAIRO WINNING IN HARD-FOUGHT BATTLE WITH MIGHTY OHIO

CAIRO, Ill., April 5.—The flood situation is greatly relieved today, although a stage of 54.7 feet was maintained by the Ohio River at Cairo, and frequent leaks in the levees kept the State militia men and citizens on the alert last night and today.

It is believed by the officials that the crest of the flood had arrived here and that the greatest danger had passed.

The bulkheads on top of the concrete walls were holding and a large force was successfully battling the "sandboils" and "blowouts" through which the water has been undermining the city. The break in the levee at Point Pleasant, Mo., seventy miles below Cairo, greatly relieved the situation here, and it was believed today saved the city from a further rise in the flood.

At Memphis a stage of 42.4 was recorded against the Mississippi at 7 a. m. today. The river is rising more than a foot every 12 hours. With the whole river valley from Helena to Cairo choked by water, preparations were made to protect the weakening point in the Arkansas and Mississippi levees.

Major Wentzel, in charge of the Mississippi levee line from Greenville to Vicksburg, has purchased a million empty carmacks for topping the levee. Three hundred acres of earth were used in checking a slight break in the Beulah levee, where crevasses occurred in 1912 and 1913. Experts say now it will hold back the water.

LEGISLATORS' SYMPATHY FOR FLOOD VICTIMS

The Committee on Federal Relations today favorably reported the following resolutions of sympathy for the sufferers by the recent floods and fires in the State of Ohio and elsewhere:

Resolved, That the members of the General Court of Massachusetts hereby express their deep sympathy with their fellow citizens in the State of Ohio and elsewhere who have suffered from the terrible storm, floods and fires which have recently devastated certain parts of the West, and especially Ohio; offer their sympathy to those whose near and dear relatives have been torn from them by sudden and violent death; and

Resolved, That the members of the General Court regret that they can not lawfully pass a measure enabling the Commonwealth itself to contribute to the relief of the sufferers in Ohio, but they are confident that this deficiency will be more than supplied by the generosity of the individual citizens of Massachusetts, all of whom are shocked and grieved by the catastrophe which has overwhelmed their fellow citizens in distant States.

TODAYS STOCK MARKET

Stock markets were weaker today owing to profit taking, uncertainty in Europe as to the Balkan situation and a number of other factors which apply particularly to this country. The declines did not average heavy, however. The local market was rather quiet and had an uncertain tone at the start. It grew a little firmer in the second hour and the price range at the close was not much below that at the end yesterday. Mexican metals continued to be strong and active on the Boston curb.

At the close in New York, American Can was 2¼ lower, American Smelting 1¾, Chesapeake & Ohio 1¾, Canadian Pacific 1½, Lehigh Valley 1¾, and St. Paul 1. Union Pacific, Steel, Reading and Amalgamated showed fractional losses. The market was active for a Saturday session.

The weekly statement of averages of the associated banks and trust companies in New York shows: Excess cash reserve $11,781,800, decreased $3,854,750; loans increased $7,570,000; specie increased $2,784,000; legals decreased $2,880,000; deposits increased $10,031,000; circulation increased $68,000.

Firm Undertone in New York.

Although a number of issues showed fractional declines at the opening in New York, a firm undertone prevailed. Profit taking in Canadian Pacific in London reflected weakness in that issue here, and it began 1¼ under Friday's closing. Chesapeake & Ohio was under pressure as the result of rumors that flood losses in the Middle West would probably entail a reduction of the dividend. Chesapeake & Ohio began at 69¾ or ¾ under last night's final.

Amalgamated was one point off at the beginning, but after half an hour had made a partial recovery. Among declines were Steel common ¼; Southern Pacific ⅛; Northern Pacific ⅛; Reading ¼; Kansas City Southern ⅝; St. Paul ¼; Anaconda ⅛; California Petroleum ¼. Southern Pacific recovered and went above 103 during the first hour. United States Rubber was up ⅝; American Smelting and Refining rose ⅜, while Erie and Missouri Pacific were unchanged on first sales. The Curb was steady.

Americans in London were firm on New York buying, but at the close of the market turned heavy on profit taking and on selling by those who did not want to go long over the week-end.

Important to Brokers.

In the New York Court of Appeals at Albany a decision of interest to stock brokers is to the effect that a customer must be notified before securities given as collateral for stock held upon margin can be sold, even though the market is fluctuating at the time with panic rapidity.

"The object to be attained by giving the notice," said Judge Werner, "is to afford the debtor an opportunity to redeem and to be present at the sale to see and know that it is fairly conducted and the property disposed of to the best advantage. Unless the notice given be such as shall accomplish this purpose, it is an illusion and of no possible utility; because if the creditor does not more than give notice of his intention to sell, without saying when or where, or in what manner, he deprives the debtor of a substantial right which the notice is designed to secure."

One Cent Duty on Sugar.

It is reported from Washington that President Wilson has notified the sugar men through Representative Broussard of Louisiana, that he will consent only to a duty of one cent a pound on sugar, provided the duty is repealed altogether in three years.

He has refused absolutely to consent to a separate sugar bill, believing the only way to pass the present tariff is to pass it as a whole.

The five sugar Senators—Williams of Mississippi, Bankhead and Ransdell of Louisiana, and Shafroth and Thomas of Colorado—are still making a stubborn fight for the old rate, but the President thinks he has them beaten.

Financial News in Brief.

Reorganization of the Central Colorado Power Company has been effected by the incorporation of the Colorado Power Company with capital stock of $20,000,000—$5,000,000 preferred and $15,000,000 common.

Stockholders of International Salt Company of New Jersey will vote on April 21 on a resolution to decrease the capital stock from the authorized issue of $30,000,000 to $6,077,180. Secretary of Treasury stock, $18,231,800 of this stock has been issued.

Exports of wheat for the week—totaling 4,081,000 bushels—eclipsed all figures for the corresponding period in any year since 1901. Last week the movement reached 3,077,000 bushels.

President H. F. Fay of the Union Copper Land & Mining Company reports to stockholders that it finished 1912 with $3,565,74 cash in the bank and with coal land holdings unchanged at 5,306.7 acres.

F. L. Milliken & Co. have issued a booklet giving high and low prices for March, dividends for April and other useful financial information.

That the United States is prosperous is indicated by the fact that in March last gems to the value of $4,841,180 were imported. With a single exception this was the largest total of its kind for any month on record.

There are about 12,000 men at present employed at Pullman Company plants. This is 29 per cent. more than were at work for the corporation a year ago. The company is operating on a 75 per cent. basis and has enough orders to keep the present force busy for at least six months.

The Westinghouse Machine Company began the first year on April 1 with about $750,000 for cash working capital.

Up to last night copper exports for the month totalled 6,317 tons.

One copper selling agency is said to have booked orders for 20,000,000 pounds of the metal within two days this week.

Directors of the W. D. Quinby Co. have voted their seventeenth quarterly dividend of 2 per cent., to be paid April 7.

PROGRESSIVES ARE DISPLEASED WITH SENATOR STEARNS

(From Today's Boston Common.)

Senator Stearns has made two additions to his reactionary record which are particularly distasteful to the Progressives in his district. One was in offering an amendment which strikes out from the bill increasing the powers of the Board of Conciliation and Arbitration the provisio that the board may require the production of books and papers—a proposal, by the way, on which the Senate courageously (?) refused to go on record. The other was his attempt, worthily seconded by Senator McLane later, to insert the word "knowingly" in the bill forbidding a time-worn device which every child knows by this time is equivalent to nullifying the bill. At this writing Senator Stearns' last year in the Legislature seems likely to end as badly as Taft's last year in the White House.

WOMAN DROPS DEAD.

CABLE NEWS

Say Westminster Shut Duchess Out.

LONDON—Society has taken sides over the separation of the Duke and Duchess of Westminster. One report is that when she got home from a small royal ball in Buckingham Palace, to which she was invited alone, she found that the porter at Grosvenor House had orders from the Duke not to admit her. This story aroused great indignation, for although the Duchess is not particularly popular, all the society women say that such treatment is unpardonable.

Twins Six Weeks Apart.

LONDON—All known birth records have been beaten by the wife of a workman at Barrow, Lancashire, who on February 24 gave birth to a son. Both the mother and the child did well. Yesterday another child—a girl—was born. The father, under the insurance act, is entitled to the quarterly benefit of $7.50. If the children are not adjudged to be twins, he will be entitled to receive another $7.50, but if they are twins the act counts them as one.

France Eager for Bonds.

PARIS—Subscriptions will be received on April 10 for a new issue of $20,000,000 of 4 per cent. State railway bonds, redeemable within forty-ajno years. It is certain that the issue will be largely oversubscribed, the interest being the highest state rate offered in France.

Feathered Choir Sails.

LONDON—A feathered choir of six hundred British song birds, including larks, linnets, chaffinches, blackbirds and thrushes, left Tilbury on board the Minneapolis for the new home provided for them in Michigan by Henry Ford, head of the well known automobile firm.

Burns Eulogizes Duke.

LONDON—In the House of Commons John Burns, the secretary of the local government board, eulogized the Duke of Marlborough for writing what he called an "excellent pamphlet" on the land question.

Princess Mary in Rotten Row.

LONDON—Princess Mary, the only daughter of the King, made her first appearance as an equestrienne in Rotten Row. She was accompanied by her father.

LEADER WARNS OF STRIKE RIOT AT HOPEDALE

Joseph M. Coldwell of Worcester, leader of the Draper mill strikers at Hopedale, today issued a warning in which he declares that there may be an outbreak at Hopedale tonight. Coldwell warns the women and children to be off the streets at an early hour. He says the least provocation may start a "riot." His warning follows:

"I cannot and will not assume responsibility for any trouble that may occur tonight. I warn women and children to get off the streets at an early hour, as it is not certain what the officers and strike-breakers may do.

I am giving this warning after serious consideration in order that bloodshed may be prevented, and also to forestall any attempt to place the blame on the strikers.

We have an acute situation in Hopedale and Milford, and the least provocation may start a riot in which someone is sure to get hurt.

Prepared for Violence.

Pending the expected arrival of strike-breakers at the Draper plant, extra precautions against violence have been taken by the company.

The plant is doubly guarded at night. There is a chain of 150 men around the buildings through the night. The entire plant is brilliantly lighted, with six powerful searchlights on the office building adding to the illumination.

The Park Hotel on Dutcher street, about fifty yards from the Draper office, is being refitted as rapidly as possible. It has been vacant five years.

It is understood that the hotel is to serve as quarters for strikebreakers which are to be imported, beginning Monday. The first batch of 200 is expected then.

The arrival of strikebreakers will publicly mark the critical time in the strike, so far as law and order go.

It was thought that eviction proceedings against strikers occupying Draper tenements would start trouble first. But the company now says it will not be hasty about evictions. So strikebreakers and not evictions are expected to cause whatever demonstrations occur next.

Transfer Employes.

The company has transferred about thirty men from other departments to the "struck" foundry to keep some of the work going which was held up by the strike. These men are said to be getting $3 a day for assisting for strikers. But not even this emergency method will keep the foundry work going long.

As the foundry is the beginning of the factory processes, it is necessary that an adequate force of moulders and other foundry workers be put on quickly, or the other departments, numbering 1,500 cutters, will be out of working material.

THREE KILLED IN HOMESTEAD MILL

PITTSBURGH, Pa., April 5.—Three men were burned to death and two others probably fatally injured early today in a gas explosion in the Homestead Steel Mills. The bodies were burned to a crisp, and cannot be identified until the roll books are examined.

TROOPS OVERAWE AUBURN STRIKERS

AUBURN, N. Y., April 5.—The presence of additional companies of militia today around the International Harvester Company and the Columbian Rope Company mills seemed to have somewhat overawed the strikers, and little demonstration was made.

FISHING CRAFT GOES ON ROCKS

The fishing schooner Gallaten, making port in a fog, went ashore on the rocks of Lovell's Island. The Strong Point life crew saw her distress signals and went to the rescue. After two hours' work the schooner was floated and managed to make port. She is slightly damaged and will be put into dry dock for repairs.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

Motorists are warned by the Automobile Legal Association to use extreme care at all cross streets in driving through Jackson street, Lawrence, between Gainsboro and the Knox Street Garage. An officer stands constantly at Park street and recently has been stopping automobilists and warning them to sound their horn and run slowly. Traps have been arranged off on Jackson street, the first one commencing at the first bridge when going on Jackson street from Rowes and includes Park street. The second starts just before reaching Park street and terminates a short distance beyond the Knox street garage.

This association also reports that the police of Cambridge are strictly enforcing the law which requires the rear lamp to be so placed that when lighted it will display the registry number in such a manner as to make it legible at a distance of sixty feet.

J. H. MacAlman, distributor of the Stearns-Knight and Columbia cars, has taken over the Charlesgate Garage. The building is at the corner of Massachusetts avenue and Newbury street and was formerly occupied by the United Motor Boston Company. Mr. MacAlman will turn it into a service station, which will enable him to give the very best of service to owners of the Stearns and Columbia cars in this territory.

EVERYONE CAN WIN PENNANT BY THIS PLAN

You can be a pennant winner.

Getting pennants is not entirely confined to the Red Sox baseball team.

The AMERICAN Promotion Department at No. 5 Winthrop square is distributing them to hundreds of people every day.

Undoubtedly the Sunday AMERICAN State, school and college pennant series is the most popular thing of its kind ever started in Boston. One reason for its great popularity is the fact that on every pennant the correct official coloring is used, while the closest attention is paid to securing an artistic reproduction.

You will not want to miss that Carlisle pennant given with a coupon from tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN and twenty cents. Either bring or send the coupon and money to the AMERICAN Promotion Department, or to any one of the 300 stations throughout Greater Boston and New England listed in the Sunday AMERICAN.

The Carlisle pennant, in correct lettering and five colors, will lead many to make a resolution to secure every one of the series hereafter issued just as fast as they make their appearance. As a decoration for the den or one's favorite room a collection of these pennants cannot be beaten.

Whatever else you do, be sure you get that Carlisle pennant.

Reciprocity, Long Advocated by Mr. Hearst, Adopted by Tariff Makers in Congress

From an interview with Mr. Hearst printed in the London Daily Express, September 12, 1912, and cabled to the AMERICAN for publication on September 13:

I am supporting the Democracy in this campaign, but I do not approve of Mr. Wilson's policy of a tariff for revenue only, nor do I think that he improves his position when he declares in support of gradual reduction of the tariff. A gradual reduction of the tariff means a continual reduction of the tariff, and the continual disturbance of the tariff means continual disturbance of business.

It would be much better for the Democrats to adopt a very definite tariff program.

Mr. Wilson says that we have grown to such a point of production that we overflow our own markets and that we must extend our markets and open up foreign markets to our produce.

This is quite true; but one reason that we fill and overflow our own markets is because legitimate protection has prevented the product of foreign manufacturers and foreign cheap labor from invading our markets and crowding our own manufacturers and our own laborers out of business.

By demolishing our own tariff fence we may get out of our own pasture, but we cannot get into the pasture of foreign nations until we have demolished their tariff fences.

If we sacrifice our protective policy we sacrifice our one opportunity to lower the tariff bars of foreign countries. IT IS ONLY BY RECIPROCITY THAT THE TARIFF BARS OF FOREIGN COUNTRIES CAN BE LOWERED.

If we maintain our protective fence we can say to foreign countries: "We will lower our bars to your products if you will lower your bars to our products." But if we have no tariff fences, we can make no such beneficial bargain.

From a statement by Mr. Hearst, cabled from Paris and printed in the AMERICAN October 10, 1912:

To secure and insure such scientific modification of the American tariff I beg most respectfully to suggest the following course:

First, the abandonment of all old stock free-trade arguments based upon fallacies and upon exploded theories and upon premises which have been proven to be false by the practical and unprofitable experiences of free trade nations like England.

Second, the recognition of the principle of protection of American industries and the wise and just application of that principle to those industries which require and deserve protection.

Third, the modification of the protective tariff on the one hand by reciprocity, which will open the markets of foreign nations to our products in return for the opening of our markets to their products, and on the other hand by preferential duties which will reduce the tariff on goods imported into the United States in American ships.

All of these policies are Democratic and have the sanction of Democratic precedent; but, more essential than that, they are patriotic. They are policies which will develop the manufactures of the nation and the trade of the nation and the merchant marine of the nation and the general prosperity of the nation. They are policies which through increased production and increased commerce and transportation and increased employment and payment will benefit every individual in the nation.

Certainly no more auspicious news has come over the wires since the sixth day of November than the news that the HOUSE COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS IS, WITH THE SANCTION OF THE PRESIDENT, TRYING TO BUILD THE NEW TARIFF ON THE PRINCIPLE OF RECIPROCITY.

The good news is clinched by the fact that Governor Foss, of our own State, who is not only an excellent, but a great business man—has sent a message to his Legislature urging a legislative memorial to Congress in favor of a thoroughgoing policy of commercial Reciprocity.

Other energetic Governors and other enlightened Legislatures ought, in the manner suggested by this signal action of Governor Foss, to join in a nation-wide movement to assure the tariff-makers at Washington that their feet have struck the straight road to prosperity, and that the people everywhere are behind them. For it is through a general policy of reciprocity that the wheels of industry in every corner of the land are to be set going at full speed.

For thirty-one years at least—since 1882, when President Arthur sent a trade commission to Latin-American countries to plan a Pan-American "Customs Union"—the people have cherished, with a growing clearness of idea, that Reciprocity is the right tariff policy.

They have come more and more to understand that Reciprocity COMBINES THE ADVANTAGES OF BOTH PROTECTION AND FREE TRADE, AND AVOIDS THE ABUSES AND EXCESSES OF BOTH.

In its pursuit of this wise and transforming idea, the American people have been balked, time and time again—three times in all—by party jealousy and private interest INTRENCHED IN THE UNITED STATES SENATE.

We should today be living in the full tide of commercial world-power—with ships manned by American sailors and flying the American flag on every sea and in every capital port—if Private Greed and Party Prejudice had not for a generation held the seats of power in the United States Senate.

It was the Senate that balked the hopeful adventure of President Arthur.

Later—in 1889—when the momentous Pan-American Congress was convened at Washington by James G. Blaine, Secretary of State, it was a Senate marshalled and mastered by Aldrich, of Rhode Island, that killed that splendid project of Reciprocity—the brightest conception of a brilliant statesman.

And finally, when, in 1897, the Dingley Tariff bill empowered the President to make a Reciprocity treaty with every nation, and after Secretary Hay had actually negotiated and signed seven advantageous trade treaties under that authorization, EVERYTHING WENT INTO THE PIGEONHOLES OF SENATORIAL PRIVILEGE, AND STAYED THERE.

But a new day has come. A new kind of Senate, with leaders of light and progress, is sitting in the old seats of monopoly and obstruction.

The day has come for the opening of closed gates and the trailing of untravelled roads. The day has come for a commercial expansion as great as the measure of our enterprise and skill.

We have the best machinery and the most skilful workmen in the world.

WHAT WE NEED IS RECIPROCITY—AND SHIPS.

Our Treatment of Convicts—Everything Should Be Done to Improve Their Condition—Wives and Children Get Part of the Profits They Produce.

Written for the Boston American

By DR. C. H. PARKHURST

UNTIL the object had in view in sending men to prison is more clearly conceived than seems to be the case at present, the results of their confinement are likely to prove more detrimental to public interest than beneficial to it.

One object of their enforced restraint appears to be to get them out of the way. As it is unreasonable and inexpedient to kill them all, the next best thing seems to be shutting them up.

Another motive is that of retaliation, give them back as good as they gave, damage them as much as they have damaged the public; so many pounds of crime, so many pounds of penalty—what might be called the bookkeeping method.

Very few are deliberately slaughtered and the number of such has been gradually reduced as civilization progresses, which gives ground for expecting that the reduction will continue till governmental assassination entirely ceases.

The great majority are set at liberty after a longer or shorter term of confinement, and it is the interests of that majority and the interests of the public in the relations to it of that majority that require to be especially consulted in shaping the policy of prison discipline.

Manhood of Prisoners Should Be Fostered While in Jail

This majority are going to return to the world and resume life there and take up once more the burden of life's activities. At least that is what it ought to be expected that they will do, and the public interest has been more sacrificed than it has been conserved, unless the ex-convict on emerging from prison is in at least as good a frame of mind, as fine a condition of body and as well qualified industrially to play his part in the world as when he entered prison.

Fundamental to all this there should be fostered in him while in jail a sense of remaining manhood. Whatever may be the criminality there are few, if any, of whom it can be justly said that they are utterly gone to the bad, and that residue of humanness should be patiently taken care of and nourished.

Any feature of human discipline therefore that treats the convict as belonging to a sub-human class is so much done toward blotting out his humanness and at the same time toward disqualifying him for playing the manly part when he is set free and resumes ordinary human relations.

Such a custom as that of knowing prisoners by their number rather than by their name is false to the finest instincts of any person who has in him even the remnants of a soul.

Even a dog or a horse that is respected by its master is not numbered or labeled, but has a name given to it. And prison keepers, debased to such a degree as to be unable to recognize and appreciate manhood even when present in only an imperfect degree, are thereby rendered incompetent to exercise penal authority. All such process of suppression and humiliation consumes the element of marrow so essential to everything that is manly or that even remotely approximates to manliness, and thereby impairs his value to the public.

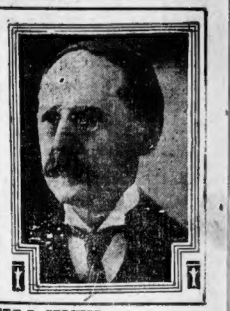
Every prisoner should have respectable work given him and plenty of it.

The products of his labor should be sold in the open market at current rates, and a due proportion of the proceeds of sale should be treated as belonging to him by right of having earned it, and by the court held in trust for the use of his family or, if he has no one naturally dependent upon him, made over to him on his dismissal from jail if judged expedient by the prison commission or other competent authority. This will have the effect of dignifying his labor instead of degrading both it and him, for otherwise it carries with it the debasement that always attaches to slave work, and it will moreover, as a kind of by-product, meet the complaint of the laboring classes outside, that they have to compete with the cheapened products of convict labor.

Wives and Children of Convicts Should Have Earnings

If the wife and children, by no fault of their own, lose the bread winner of the family, and the State makes enough out of him over and above expenses to supply the family with the bread that belongs to them, it would seem pretty clearly a matter of fraud to take it out of hungry mouths and put it into a comfortable public treasury.

Nature Has Yet Many Puzzles for Science to Solve



Chemistry, with All Its Analytical Skill, Can not Perform Miracles, the Futile Efforts of Hundreds of Noted Scientists Clearly Demonstrate

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

JUST because this is so ingenious an age, and an age so remarkable for its rapid advance in science, we who live in its inspiring atmosphere need an occasional reminder that we do not yet know everything, and that there are on the slippery precipices of unattained knowledge still above us many awkward and difficult corners to be turned before we can approach the snowy peak which sails away in the sky like a cloud.

I find such a reminder in a partial list of "standing puzzles of science" which I have just been reading, and I present this list here, with some added remarks, simply for the sake of the useful thought that it is calculated to inspire. Some of the statements may be slightly misleading, or incomplete, but upon the whole they are sufficiently true.

I.—The diamond, the hardest substance known, and one of the most transparent, a marvel of beauty on account of the subtle way in which it plays with the colored elements of light, is composed of pure carbon. But lampblack is also pure carbon, and charcoal is practically the same thing! If you put the diamond into fire it swells up and becomes an ugly mass, as black and opaque as coke. All its crystalline beauty is gone, and you cannot turn it back again into a gem. It is like a body without a soul.

Common Albumen Cannot Be Turned Into Snake Venom

II.—Rattlesnake poison and the white of an egg contain the same amounts of identically the same chemical elements. But we cannot turn common albumen into snake venom.

III.—Coal gas and oil of roses each consist of four atoms of hydrogen, combined with four atoms of carbon. The one delights our sense of smell, and the other stifles us with its mephitic odor. Here again nature has a secret which she imparts only to the unthinking flower

IV.—Oil of orange, lemon, cloves, ginger and black pepper is, in every instance, composed of sixteen atoms of hydrogen and ten of carbon, yet each has its distinctive taste and smell.

V.—Ammonia, a strong whiff of which will knock a man down, is composed of hydrogen and nitrogen, neither of which has any odor.

VI.—Copper is practically odorless and so is zinc, but when they are melted together, in certain proportions, the result is a metal, brass, which has a decided and characteristic smell.

In view of all this, it is no wonder that the secrets of the flowers and fruits escape us. Nobody will buy an imitation of the attar of roses who can get the pure product of nature, distilled in the great field laboratories that sweeten and beautify the meadows of warlike Bulgaria.

The jams and conserves of apples, grapes, strawberries and other fruits, that imitative chemistry puts up, with a minimum of cost and a maximum of price, cannot deceive the palate of the grown-up boy who used to eat these things with open joy at his father's table, and sometimes, covertly, in his mother's pantry.

Science can analyze milk, but only the cow can make it. We know what are the chemical constituents of honey, but the bee alone possesses the secret of putting them together in such a way that man will risk a good deal of stinging in order to enjoy the matchless flavor of the wonderful product.

Can Chemistry Ever Solve True Secret of the Honey-Bee?

If you have ever robbed a bumblebee's nest you know how exquisitely different is the taste of its honey from that of the honey made by the hive bee; but can chemistry discover the peculiar secret of the burly "yellow-breeched philosopher," or give us something as good as he makes?

Smell some of the sickening perfumes that science concocts and then turn and press a rose or a lilac to your nose!

Eat a bowl of old-fashioned corn meal mush with milk, and then say if you can, where it got its flavor. Take a handful of wheat, another of oats and another of rye, and chew a little of each in turn—can chemistry tell you just how and why they differ or imitate them?

In the orchard hang apples, almost infinitely varied in the flavor of their juices, and cherries, and pears, and apricots, and in the adjoining garden grows grapes and berries of a dozen varieties, each having its own peculiar delight in store for your palate. They are all formed from the same soil and the same air, but you must depend upon nature to furnish them. Chemistry, with all its analytical skill, cannot perform the miracle.

Luther Burbank can gradually turn a field of yellow poppies into a field of crimson ones, but he cannot give the color to the flowers.

Burbank Simply Detects Half-Hidden Tendency of Nature

He simply detects some half-hidden or forgotten tendency of nature, and encourages it, as you may turn a stream of water into a different course.

In that way true science is born and true worship is performed. The smell of the sacrifice that the Creator loves is that which arises from the altars of a knowledge which is not afraid to learn all it can and not ashamed to wonder where it cannot as yet explain.

THE OLD BLUE GOWN

By MINNA IRVING

I TAKE it from the wardrobe shelf
Where it so long has lain,
And bring its rumpled ruffles forth
Into the light again.
The lace is yellow on the sleeves,
The silk is faded too;
But what a happy time I had
When this old gown was new.

The beaux, they all came flocking round
The night I wore it first.
I recollect the waist was tight,
I thought the seams would burst.
I danced with Ned, and then he said
How well I looked in blue;
He popped the question going home,
When this old gown was new.

Some withered roses, brown and dry,
Still to the bodice cling.
Run, Willie, and the scissors, quick.
Right here to mama bring.
There's plenty in the skirt to make
A dress for little Sue,
They made 'em seven yards around,
When this old gown was new.
